ISLANDER AMID THE HULLABALOO

SPOTS ONLY TWO INDIANS IN THE CROWDS

Centennial Mania Sweeps Over Nation's Capital

By JOHN MIKA
Times Staff Reporter

OTTAWA—(Observations, mental and visual, of an islander on Parliament Hill, Dominion Day, 1967.)
The age is the message and it says we're 100 years young.

Tots and teens, children everywhere:
Laughing, crying, running, sitting, sprawling, tugging, singing, chewing, cheering, sleeping, shouting, whispering, smoking, dancing, marching, jumping, searching, waving, whistling, swearing, smiling.

Scrambling over state lawns, dashing traffic in Confederation Square, sneaking through police lines, standing head and shoulders tall above the queues and still curled inside the womb, bellying out maternity dresses.

They were in the capital by the thousand, native and visiting, and while the adults celebrated the past solemnly they toasted the future with pop, ice cream, birthday cake and a welcoming yell for the Queen.

A young boy started it when he took a seat beside former Governor-General Vincent Massey on the dais for dignitaries greeting the Queen on arrival at the airport tarmac because he wanted a good view.

He talked "stuff" with Mr. Massey, then threw the monarch a snappy salute that caught her eye and made her, first, blink then smile broadly.

Next day, I watch a sports-shirted youngster about 10 playing at an open second-storey casement of the prime minister's suite in the east block, possibly one of his many grandsons.

He is clicking off shots aimlessly with a plastic pistol when he notices a stiff red coat, guarding the entrance below, looking up over his shoulder to locate the noise.

Slowly, staring back, the boy trains his pistol with deliberate care and gets his moustache with one shot. Grinning triumphantly, he disappears from the window.

Ottawa is ablaze with color and astir with excitement.

An incredible array of flags and bunting, from pastel hues of centennial banners to boldly vivid national and royal colors, lines every official driveway, overhangs every portal, dresses every stone wall, festoons every rooftop, drapes every streetlight standard.

Scaffolding platforms for television cameras, long distance microphones, spotters, press cameramen, announcers, sprout from lawns and building tops on all sides. One cameraman even dangles from the extended boom end of a high rise construction crane towering near the national cenotaph while the Queen lays the royal wreath.

He is lowered after the ceremony, missing a shot of two moustaches racing to guard the wreath as a chunk of the crowd breaks and surges up the steps to gaze and snap the sad token.

Inundated, the red coats and the base of the monument disappear under the press of people. Two hours later, looking weary, the moustaches are still trying to control a flock of sightseers. An hour later — only a few linger and a commissioner is relief guard.

Uniforms of all description infiltrate the masses of civilians, a colorful army themselves with gaudy miniskirts, Bermuda shorts, palsy pants, weird sunglasses, bare chests, beate mops, bald pates.

The intent civil servants rushing home, finished for the holiday, break their orderly lines and dart pellmell to the roadside barricades as they hear the sibilant of pipes. Around the corner come highland pipers and drummers, ranks of guards in red coats and bearskin hats, contingents of white dressed tars, khaki uniformed soldiers and airmen.

But it's only a brief, impromptu parade. Mess call has sounded and they're marching off to supper. The crowd melts slowly, its mood suddenly gay.

Some wander down Sparks Street pedestrian mall where gleeful children play in the fountains, grownups shelter on benches under trees, barefoot hippies puddle ankle-deep in the pools and a young girl strums a guitar by a display case of paintings.

The great day at last. Brilliant sunshine confounding the thunderstorm predictions looses throngs eager for a happening.

Good natured, casually dressed but not in extreme styles, they come on foot from all directions, Parliament Hill drawing them like a magnet out of the stone canyons and onto the wide expanse of green grass, soon overflowing with a wide expanse of white faces.

As always, the undulating rolls of applause, rustling the lines like a hoarse wind, traces the progress of the royal motorcade. A cheer bursts forth as the Royal standard of Canada replaces the maple leaf atop the Peace Tower.

The ceremonial flourishes of the Royal Anthem catch the self-conscious rows of special guests by surprise as some stand, some crouch undecided and others sit resolutely only to spring to attention in delayed confusion — all awkward in their exposed platform positions.

On the ground, children chatter, youths focus binoculars, amateurs struggle with cameras. As more hundreds arrive, some watch, others gossip, everyone circulates in search of a better position.

The crowd buzzes steadily like a cluster of bees, but meaning no disrespect, even while the Queen reads her speech.

A long, white banner wiggles over the mass of heads. It says "I'm proud to be a Canadian" on one side. On the other, "Je suis fier d'être Canadien."

"It's our centennial project," says one of the five students from MacDonald High School 20 miles from Montreal who made it and brought it here to hold high.

They are Robert Gibson, 17, Gloria Ness, 17, Diane Morrison, 17, Nancy Dunton, 16, Gordon Baker, 17.

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo crowds cheered the Queen this morning as she opened a rain-soaked tour of the world fair under heavy security guard.

She was greeted by Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec and Premier John Robarts of Ontario at their provinces' pavilions.

Police were watchful reminding demonstrators by separatists when the Queen visited Quebec in November, 1964.

Security arrangements were disrupted, however, when the Queen took an unscheduled 45-minute mini-rail tour of the entire site.

She was about to leave when she asked Prime Minister Pearson if she couldn't see the entire show.

Mr. Pearson agreed and they boarded the mini-rail which circles the fair.

The tour by the umbrella-carrying Queen and rain-coated Prince Philip to the Quebec and Ontario pavilions came in mid-morning after they arrived for the world fair visit at 9:39 a.m. aboard the royal yacht, Britannia.

Tidily-overcast weather and rain greeted the royal couple. The Queen drove in a black closed car to Notre-Dame section of Expo past the high, glass-walled Soviet pavilion, one of the fair's most impressive.

SEE BRITISH DISPLAY
Her tour took her to the British pavilion with its mini-skirted hostesses, to the Western pavilion with its 100-ton logging truck about which Prince Philip asked questions, and on to Quebec's boxlike pavilion and Ontario's, one of the fair's best with architecture described as like a great spider fighting under a piece of cloth.

The Queen travelled from the British to Western pavilions in a trailer train called la Balade that travels the fairground pavements. Glass was installed on the side of the Balade sent the Queen shared with Pierre Dupuy, Expo commissioner-general.

In the Quebec pavilion, which many call highly intellectual because of its sounds and sight, the Queen was greeted by Premier Johnson. He escorted her about, explaining in French the highlights, including a color movie on a huge screen that blasts out its message about developing Quebec industry.

A luxuriously bound book about the island of Orleans in the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City was presented as a memento to the Queen as well as a quaintly-shaped object that seemed to puzzle her until she was told it was a paper-cutter.

Fighting Erupts At Canal

From AP-Reuters

Egyptian and Israeli troops clashed at the Suez Canal for the third straight day today.

The Israeli Army said Egyptian troops on the canal's west bank lobbed mortars and fired machine-guns for 20 minutes at Israeli soldiers on the east bank near El Qantara, about 25 miles from the canal's northern entrance.

Israel, which captured nearly all of Egypt east of the canal in the June 5-10 war, reported three such mortar and machine-gun attacks Sunday on its positions near El Qantara. The Israelis said they silenced the Egyptian gunners each time.

The two sides clashed Saturday night on the east bank. Egypt claimed its men had been there all along. Israel said about 100 Egyptians had crossed the canal and penetrated about nine miles into the Sinai Peninsula before being driven back across the waterway.

Israeli military men interpreted the new outbreak as an attempt by Egyptian President Nasser to rally his shattered army against the threat of an Israeli invasion.

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The UN General Assembly neared a vote today on the Middle East crisis as sponsors of two rival resolutions vied for the two-thirds majority necessary for approval.

BIG MOMENT of the July 1 celebrations at Legislative Buildings Saturday came when Rear Admiral John A. Charles presented hand-embroidered flag to Premier Bennett during ceremonies which included parade of men of all branches of the armed forces, a march past, and a fly-past by air force jets from Comox. (More July 1 celebration pictures and stories on Page 14.)

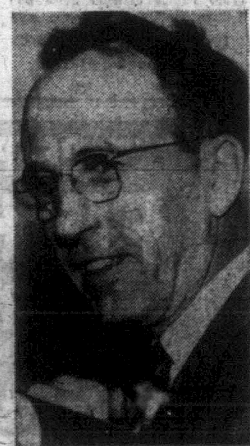

Canada Timid on Viet Due to U.S. Tie—NDP

TORONTO (CP)—T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, aroused a party convention today with charges that dependence on the United States has made the Canadian government timid on the Vietnam war.

In his keynote address at the opening of the party's fourth national convention, he said Canada is becoming an economic colony of the U.S. Its capacity for "independent action in world affairs is being reduced to zero."

Fairly subdued to that point, the packed hotel convention hall erupted into applause as the socialist leader decried the "ambivalent" Canadian role in the war.

He said Canada should ask other countries to join in a declaration calling for an unconditional end to the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

DOUGLAS
... stirs convention

The Americans are "seeking to foist on the people of South Vietnam a government of rapacious landlords, military dictators and discredited collaborators of a colonial regime."

As he has in the past, Mr. Douglas said he is not suggesting that Canada be anti-American, but Canada must regain control of its own economy to allow it to pursue an independent role.

MORTGAGE ON HOUSE
The Liberal government's attitude on Vietnam is understandable, he said.

"It is in the position of a man who hesitates to offend a wealthy neighbor because the neighbor has a mortgage on his house."

Mr. Douglas said Canada did not escape from one form of colonialism "only to fall into a more subtle and sinister one."

He was interrupted 22 times by applause in the wide-ranging speech, largely a rundown on NDP economic and social goals.

There was no mention of nationalization in the 22-page speech, but Mr. Douglas reaffirmed the party view that government intervention and government ownership must play an important role in Canadian life.

In keeping with the moderate tones of the stage-setting address, he said there will always be "a major role" for private and co-operative enterprise.

'HANG-LOOSE GENERATION' SKETCHED

On the occasion of Canada's 100th birthday, columnist Peter C. Newman has sketched a profile of the new generation which will set the political pattern for Canada's second century.

By the time the next federal election is called, some 57 per cent of the country's population will be under 30 years old.

The article on page 5 of today's Times examines the ethics, the tempo and the aspirations of the "hang-loose generation," and the new kind of politics that will be required to re-involve it in the process of Canadian nation building.

TWO OTHERS IN B.C. GET IRISH PRIZES

Island Family Excited With $60,000 Win

A Campbell River man won $60,000 in the running of the Irish Derby at Curragh, Ireland, Saturday.

Robert Walker, former owner of a stationery store, held a ticket on second place horse Sucaryl.

He is married and has two children.

Son David, 21, is enrolled in a business management course at the British Columbia Institute of Technology. Joan, 19, is a secretary at the Campbell River hospital.

Mr. Walker said the entire family is "surprised and excited."

"I've been buying sweepstakes tickets for over 12 years," he said.

Except for a trip to Expo

and a visit with a brother in Halifax, the Walkers have no immediate plans.

Since selling his stationery business, Mr. Walker hasn't decided what he will do next. He plans to invest his winnings for the time being.

Two other British Columbia residents also won $60,000.

One of them was Rex Lupton, of Westbank, near Kelowna.

Owner of a real estate business, he intends to invest the money in his firm.

A psychiatric nurse at Riverview Hospital near Coquitlam, Mrs. Ethel Miller, held a ticket on the third place horse, Dart Board. She won $30,000.

No one in B.C. held a ticket on the winner, Ribocco. Eight Canadians won the $150,000 top prize.

Four Victorians and three other Vancouver Island residents drew tickets on horses not running.

...CENTENNIAL MANIA

"Everyone makes it sound like a crime. They ask why did we do it. We're just what the sign says, proud to be Canadians. 'You're from Victoria? Gee, all the way across Canada? Gee.'"

Suddenly, it's over and the crowd breaks at a dead run toward the receding line of mounties for a last shout and wave at the Monarch — last for the morning.

Sixty tons of carillons peal out sweet sound above, as once again the RCMP, a whole phalanx this time, forms a protective screen around the throne chair on its red carpeted dais where a massive surge spills great numbers to gaze and photograph.

Suddenly I feel alone in the crowd, recognizing only the faces of old-fashioned VIPs but no friends. I notice that the solid-seeming stone block and polished timber backdrop supporting the canopy over the throne is made only of cardboard and smooth paper. Half an hour later, it is gone.

As the four Howitzers begin crashing out their 100 high-velocity blanks nearby, I seek shelter inside the dim and peaceful light of the rotunda under the Peace Tower although it's stone floor trembles with each muffled roar.

I am alone, save for one woman sitting with her head sunk into a hand and the business-as-usual commissionaires. The central stone pillar catches my eye, it is deeply inscribed: — 1817-1917 July

"On the fifteenth anniversary of the confederation of British Colonies in North America as the Dominion of Canada, Parliament and people dedicate this building, in process of reconstruction after damage by fire, as a memorial to the deeds of their forefathers and of the valour of those Canadians who in the great war fought for the liberty of Canada, of the Empire and of Humanity."

It serves as a reminder that in this day's ceremony, too, the main performer remains the institution which this building houses — government by proxy freely chosen.

For the captains and the kings depart and even great wars dim in memory as they are succeeded by unforced and even greater wars. And where is the Empire now?

History of necessity will rush by this moment as it leaves everything behind.

I ponder on this again later as I view the cornerstone inscriptions on the great edifices here, names such as the Duke of Connaught, Prince of Wales, King George VI — and am brought up short by the name on the national archives and library opened a month back. It is Georges P. Vanier, who was to have presided over this celebration but already is a Governor-General of the past.

Was it characteristic Canadianism to take this turn of mind or was I just responding to the reports in both the Toronto and Fleet Street press that many think this will be the last royal tour by an English Monarch in Canada and that there is a sense of unease in the land that even surprisingly successful centennial celebrations can't soothe.

Outside, the bronze back of Sir John A. Macdonald's monument is firmly turned against the howitzers creating their ear-splitting, eye-blinking racket as if to underline that the sound of guns is no way to praise the birth of a nation which was created by silent pen strokes, to our great good luck.

Three tots climb happily over the shield-bearing female figure in bronze at Sir John A.'s feet and I am comforted to see someone has poked a bouquet of roses through the crown top of the bronze standard in her hand.

I suddenly realize that I have seen only one drunk staggering through the streets since the celebrations began. How different, I imagine, it must have been 100 years ago.

But troubled thoughts return. For I have seen only a handful of negroes in this happy city and but two Indian faces, one of them a costumed maiden in a parade.

Why are there so few here when this nation, which occupies half a continent in which millions of colored people live, celebrates its good fortune? The question answers itself, unhappily.

The kids save the day once more — sweeping over the grounds for the Queen's appearance at the afternoon birthday party complete with huge cake, clowns, puppets, tumblers and many other acts following Judy La Marsh's invitation to everybody come on down and have a good time.

More than 1,000 balloons are quickly passed out and most of them sail off into the blue towards Montreal. Then come the goodies.

The Queen joins in the happiness of numberless youngsters then rushed off to another green area where there is a "royal hula-hoop" with teen-agers singing and swinging.

Afterwards, Parliament Hill is so thickly littered with paper wrappers, cups and bits of cake that it piles up a foot high at the curbings like drifted snow.

But everyone did have a good time and maintenance men guiding power sweepers soon plough it green again, row by row.

Resting, my eye follows the angry of a clucking, head-wagging greyhound lady beside me and I see a yellow shirted boy cycling through thick traffic glancing proudly back at the centennial balloon he dangles in the breeze. He disappears abruptly in the swirl of buses and cars and the old woman mutters to herself.

"Three shavetails in Air Force cadet uniforms appear broadly smiling under the small red maple leaf flags they wear as cockades in their hats, and the woman chuckles again. It's their century coming up and they'll live it in their own style, not ours, I whisper, but she doesn't hear.

And now it's night, and I am on a ninth-storey roof with my eyes dazzled by the splendid fireworks surrounding the Peace Tower while the whole square below is illuminated intermittently as a building-to-building carpet of people looking upwards.

Cars honk everywhere, people shout and a cynic beside me laughs and says sarcastically, "I will cherish this moment forever."

He doesn't mean it. But I do. And undoubtedly it will never be forgotten by the thousands of children in that crowd below thrilling to be allowed to stay up until midnight to see something so fabulous. None of them could have had a better birthday celebration.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

DOMINION
PUBLIC WEATHER OFFICE
9 A.M. FORECASTS

Valid Until Midnight Tuesday

SYNOPSIS—Rain is expected to reach the north coast today and cloud will continue to penetrate the central interior due to a disturbance in the Gulf of Alaska.

Sunny, warm weather will continue in southern regions. Afternoon temperatures will reach 85 on parts of the south coast and 90 to 95 in the southern interior today. However, a high level disturbance moving eastward over Washington and Oregon brings a threat of isolated thunderstorms for southeastern B.C. this afternoon. the royal couple from his pavilion to that of his neighbor, Premier Robarts, just next door on Notre Dame Island.

The visit was running behind schedule and the Queen spent 45 minutes in the Ontario pavilion instead of the scheduled 25. Prince Philip joked and jostled his way among a cluster of reporters while the Queen remained with security guards.

The Queen wore a hat with a floral design matching her pink and green ensemble. Women observers noted that she still wears nylon hose with seams.

She was cheered by a group of Commonwealth Youth Movement representatives, special guests at the Ontario pavilion, and remained several minutes before a model waterfall that is part of the display.

A reception and lunch, with speeches by the Queen and Prime Minister Pearson, were held at the Canadian pavilion before the royal couple visited its exhibits.

At the Indian pavilion the Queen was welcomed by Chief Andrew Deslisle, pavilion commissioner-general and chief of the Coughmawaga Indian reserve 12 miles outside Montreal.

COMMENTS ON SIGN

He said the Queen found the pavilion interesting and stopped before a sign reading "white man's school is alien land to the Indian child" to comment that many people in the world were facing the same problems.

Chief Deslisle said he was welcoming the Queen as a guest and not as a sovereign because the Iroquois Indians had never signed a surrender treaty.

But Marie Knockwood of Prince Edward Island, a hostess near the pavilion's entrance, said after the royal couple had passed: "Indians are as happy to see the Queen as any Canadians. She's a queen to me."

The pavilion tour was started by a 30-minute stroll through the massive British showpiece.

Did Prince
Or PR Man Annoy Queen?

By GERALD WARING
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — Her Majesty was not amused. In fact, she looked downright annoyed. But it wasn't clear whether she was annoyed at her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, or the official the Duke had berated for having had the temerity to address her.

It happened before the state dinner at Rideau Hall, the residence of the Governor General, that becomes the Queen's palace during her Canadian visits. Queen Elizabeth had graciously consented, as protocol officials put it, to pose with her husband before the news cameras.

Ottawa photographer Duncan Cameron wanted a shot from a different angle, but protocol forbade him from approaching the queen.

More important, perhaps, so did burly Canadian Mounties who keep the press in check during Royal appearances.

Cameron signalled Guy Robitaille, press secretary to Governor-General Roland Michener, and explained his need. Robitaille approached the Queen and presented the photographer's request.

The duke, who has a reputation for antipathy towards the press, witnessed this and intercepted Robitaille to dress him down for his breach of Royal protocol. No one may address the Queen unless she speaks first, and any requests should be relayed to her through one of her eunuchs.

The Queen looked flustered and annoyed moments later as she and the Duke spoke out of hearing of others, and it was anyone's guess whether she was annoyed with the blowing of the press soap, or the action of the press secretary.

Sneak Thieves
Rifle Lockers
At Crystal Pool

Thieves armed with keys touched off a rash of thefts from lockers at Crystal Gardens swimming pool over the weekend.

William Cramer of Seattle told officers he lost his wallet containing $70 and personal papers from one of the rented boxes Friday evening.

Saturday evening Norman Wilkinson of 2135 Pender street lost $60, a $100 watch and $108 cheque in a similar theft.

Investigating officers found four other lockers had been rifled and $135 taken from a wallet in one of them.

CLUB ENTERED

Burglars who broke into the Uplands Golf Club clubhouse overnight missed nearly $300 they dislodged from a hiding place.

After failing to force open a soft drink machine outside the building, they crawled in through a rear window. The money, they dislodged was found on the floor this morning.

Liquor in the building was untouched and nothing is apparently missing.

'Come Home To Be Shot'

KINSHASA, The Congo (AP) — The Congo government has asked Algeria to extradite former premier Moise Tshombe to Kinshasa, formerly Leopoldville, so it can execute him on charges of treason and plotting to overthrow President Joseph Mobutu.

Since most African nationalist leaders consider Tshombe a puppet of the colonialists, it was assumed that Algeria's anti-Western regime would turn him over soon to The Congo government.

Tshombe is being held in Algiers after the apparent hijacking Saturday of a British charter plane in which he was travelling from Palma de Mallorca to the nearby Mediterranean island of Ibiza, in the Spanish Balearics.

Algerian officials said several mercenary soldiers and Belgian citizens were on the plane with Tshombe, along with three British subjects, the pilot, co-pilot and hostess. Reports to Paris from Algiers said Tshombe's arrival was a surprise to the government of President Houari Boumedienne. Algerian officials denied they arranged the landing at Boufarik military air field west of Algiers.

Algeria and The Congo broke diplomatic relations in 1964 under Tshombe's regime and never have formally resumed them.

PARTLY BANNED

The 49-year-old Congolese leader has been in European exile for 19 months, living most recently in Madrid. Tshombe's political party has been banned in The Congo, his property confiscated and his supporters thrown out of their positions.

Disciples of the late Patrice Lumumba, The Congo's first premier and its nationalist hero, blame Tshombe for Lumumba's murder while he was Tshombe's prisoner in Katanga province in 1961.

The Congo government radio and official statements also have been harping on the theme that Tshombe is responsible for The Congo's troubles and that he is an "imperialist puppet" and "an enemy of African independence."

Tshombe was sentenced to death in absentia by a Congolese military tribunal last March after it found him guilty of treason and subversion. Most of the charges grew out of the secession of his copper-rich Katanga province from the rest of The Congo in 1960.

Tshombe tried to consolidate his gains politically in 1965 and formed a party with the aim of beating President Joseph Kasavubu in elections scheduled for 1966. Kasavubu fired him, however, and in the ensuing political turmoil Mobutu grabbed the reins and named himself president.

Tshombe still is popular in Katanga with his Lunda tribesmen. But his supporters have sat by quietly while Mobutu's government dragged his name in the mud.

TSHOMBE
...abducted

'Most Disliked African Leader'

By Reuters

Moise Tshombe, former premier of The Congo and president of the one-time breakaway province of Katanga, is one of the most controversial figures in African politics.

He declared Katanga's secession in July, 1960, 11 days after The Congo became independent under Premier Patrice Lumumba, and fought to keep the rich mining province independent for more than two years.

He formally declared the secession ended in January, 1963, after the United Nations fought a campaign to gain control of the breakaway province.

Tshombe, born in Katanga Nov. 10, 1919, went into exile abroad — mainly in Madrid — after the Katanga secession effort failed, but was recalled in June, 1964, to become The Congo's fourth premier, by presidential decree.

However, in October, 1965, President Joseph Kasavubu forced Tshombe to resign and he again went into exile in Madrid where he had a luxurious apartment and office. He has been in exile since then.

OPPOSED GOVERNMENT
The Congolese government believes Tshombe has continued in Madrid to work against it and for some form of greater independence for Katanga.

The Congolese government claimed last week that saboteurs from Madrid blew up a key railway bridge on a line carrying Katanga's important copper exports to the Portuguese Angola port of Lobito last month.

Tshombe was one of the most anti-Communist of African politicians and one of the most criticized by Communist countries. He also was disliked in almost every other African state because he was held at least partly responsible for the murder of Lumumba.

Lumumba was arrested in Leopoldville (now Kinshasa) in December, 1960, and two months later flown to the Katanga capital of Elisabethville (now Lumumbashi), where Tshombe was still in power. A short while later Lumumba was found murdered near Elisabethville.

Tshombe fell into central government hands while still president of Katanga.

TSHOMBE ARRESTED

During moves and counter-moves to end the secession, Tshombe was arrested by the central government and held several weeks until he promised to keep Katanga within The Congo. He repudiated this pledge when he returned to Elisabethville, however.

In October, 1964, when he was premier of The Congo, Tshombe was arrested on arrival at Cairo to attend a summit meeting of non-aligned nations, at which he was not welcome. He was kept under house arrest until he left three days later.

Tshombe is a burly man, nearly six feet tall, with a huge smile. He is an extrovert, fast-talking, eloquent and energetic.

He comes from a rich commercial family related to the royal family of the Lunda, one of Katanga's most powerful tribes, and married the paramount chief's daughter. They have 10 children.

Two Nailed to Cross Demonstrate Yoga

MONTREAL (CP) — Patrick Benichou, a 28-year-old yoga teacher, and his 26-year-old wife, Mariza, were brought down Sunday from the cross-like structures to which they had allowed themselves to be nailed the day before, in a demonstration in an east-end auditorium.

Mr. Benichou, with nails through one hand and one foot, came down from the virtually erect wooden structure after having spent nearly 30 hours in that position. His wife, with nails through both hands, was brought down after 24 hours.

Mr. Benichou said he experienced some swelling of a foot. His wife was said to have suffered some bleeding.

It took Mr. Benichou about 40 minutes to extract the two nails from his body after the experience. He said that although the pain in his foot was intense, he did not expect any complications.

The whole undertaking was designed to demonstrate the power of persons skilled in the use of yoga.

The nails were eased into their hands and Mr. Benichou's foot manually and with utmost care. A hammer was used in the attaching of the nail to the wood only after the nail had actually penetrated through the flesh.

After drinking only coffee and fruit juice throughout the experiment, Mr. Benichou said when he came down the first thing he wanted to do was to go to a restaurant for a steak.

A late development of Hinduism, yoga is a system which seeks to liberate the individual from what it considers to be the illusory world of phenomena.

Mr. Benichou, who directs a number of yoga institutes in Canada and France, presented his demonstration as an example of the physical trial which a yogi can endure.

The cross-like structures for their outstretched arms were both equipped with what seemed to be bicycle seats, which served as supports for him and his wife.

There were also supports months ago.

Man Found In Car In Ditch

Police found Norman Morrison, 25, of Chemainus, clutching a half-full bottle of wine when they looked in a car on its side in a Burnside ditch early last Thursday.

Morrison, who pleaded guilty to impaired driving, was fined $350 and had his driving licence suspended.

Lloyd Ward, 35, of 537 West Bay Terrace, was fined $300 when he also admitted in central court to impaired driving.

Court was told police followed his auto after it drove erratically from a beer parlor parking lot near Colwood. Ward's licence was also suspended.

Five Years to Find Out

CANADA'S REPRESENTATIVES in the tariff negotiations of the Kennedy Round appear to have done some tough bargaining, and the country still remains one of the most highly protected trading areas in the world. We must wait for the full effect of the tariff cuts, to be applied over the next five years, before it is possible to know whether our bargainers have done Canada a disservice or not.

In any case, while Canada has agreed to many tariff cuts—although Parliament must still ratify the new arrangements—there is considerable doubt as to whether the consuming public will benefit much in the way of lower prices. Often the cuts will mean little change in prices—as, for instance, when an already low tariff rate is reduced by one-fifth. The main benefits for the country are expected to result from the impetus to export trade which will derive from lower tariff walls among many of our customers. But highly efficient production will be necessary if Canadian industry is to compete with other countries for these markets, since any tariff concession made by one country to another is, under GATT rules, automatically made available to all countries.

Since Canada's trade involves the United States more than any other nation, the new tariff schedules agreed to by our neighbor are, of course, our main consideration. And there appear to be many incentives to greater exports to the United States market. Canadian emphasis has been placed on the industries in which we have a natural aptitude, and there is promise in the involved export conditions which have been secured for Canadian wood and paper products, fish and many agricultural items.

Opposition parties in parliament have reacted in expected fashion. Mr. Diefenbaker is concerned about the effect on Canadian producers of textiles, plastics and chemicals of the tariff cuts to which Canada has agreed. Obviously, Canada could not obtain concessions from other countries without giving some in exchange, and in any case, there is little point in keeping inefficient producers in business indefinitely by means of high tariff protection. At some point we must face facts and accept the competition of the world.

Canadian industry should be able to compete without artificial aid in the form of high prices which domestic consumers must pay. Insofar as the new Kennedy Round rates expose Canadian production to the test of competition they will serve to brush away false bonuses for some Canadian producers and emphasize our efforts in those fields in which we enjoy a natural advantage.

The long-heralded Kennedy Round tariff cuts have in the end proved much less than originally envisaged. But the forthcoming benefits to world trade may later stimulate the nations to still further freedom in the exchange of goods, and Canada may yet find that winning a battle to retain high tariffs can be more of a loss than a victory.

Scientific Approach?

REPORTS FILTERING OUT OF Ottawa suggest some odd things are happening to Canada's recently-formed Science Council, the body set up by the government to make independent evaluations and recommendations on science projects which are supported by public funds.

Like the Economic Council of Canada, the Science Council is to issue annual and special reports on which the country's whole scientific community could then comment and thus help the government make up its mind. But Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, the Crown corporation which regulates all nuclear research for Ottawa, has apparently persuaded the Science Council to recommend that the government go ahead with the construction of a $200-million Intense Neutron Generator project although no public report has been made.

Even more unusual, the Science Council was approached by AECL through Mr. Jean-Luc Pepin, minister of energy, mines and resources. According to the council's vice-president, Dr. Roger Gaudry, this means that there may not be any formal report since requests from ministers can be treated confidentially. How this will help bring about the widest possible evaluation of the neutron generator project is difficult to see. AECL is talking in terms of spending $200 millions of the public's money and while the generator project may promise, as the Crown corporation claims, "a radical new approach to economic nuclear power," there are other considerations involved.

It would seem only reasonable that Canadian nuclear physicists other than those employed by AECL — the university scientists whose independent work is invaluable—should have a voice in this matter. Many of them would like to see large regional nuclear physics laboratories set up across the country which would give better access to research equipment too expensive for most universities to buy.

At the very least the Science Council should have been given time to complete its examination of the full national scientific and technological scene and to draw up the list of priorities which the government needs before Mr. Pepin and AECL began the push for the neutron generator. Behind-the-scenes lobbying for pet projects is not the best way in which to make decisions on what Canada can and should do in vital scientific fields with a relatively limited amount of money.

Easing up on the Inoffensive

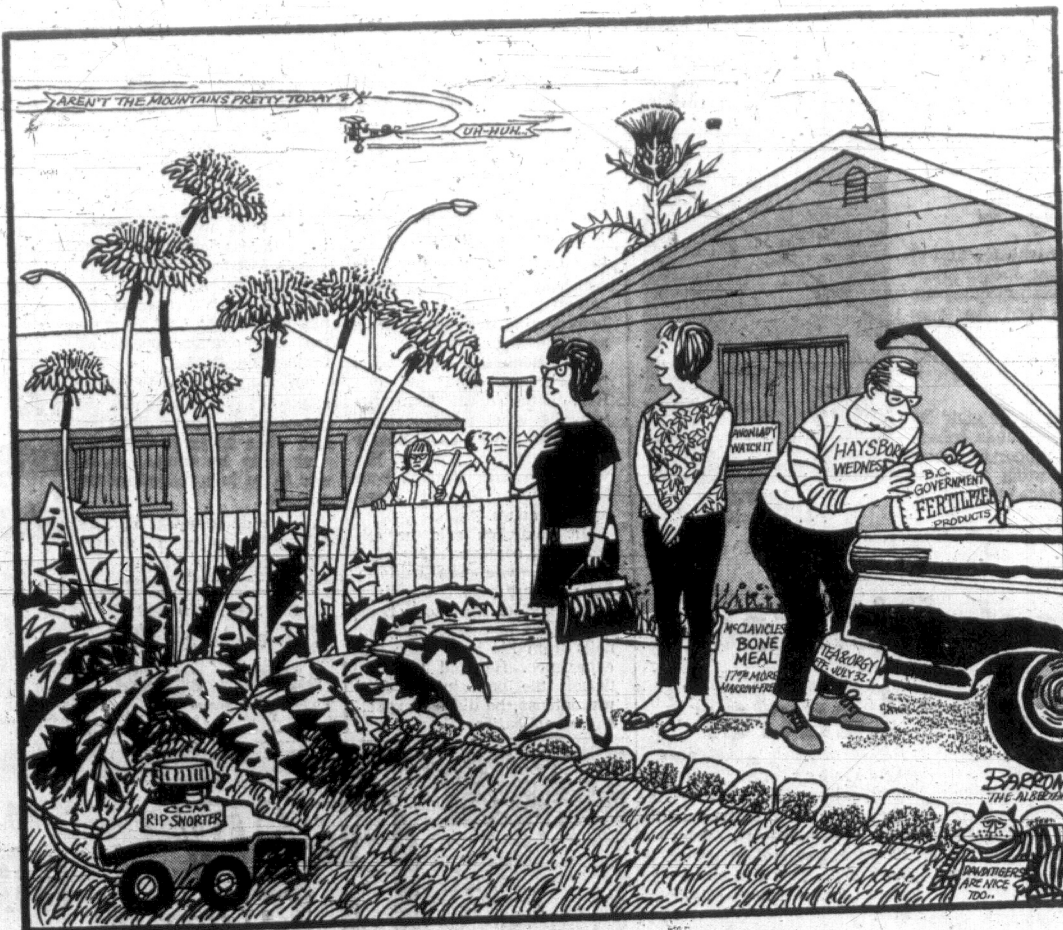

ATTORNEY-GENERAL BONNER's comments on the advisability of avoiding arrest and court action against inoffensive drunks and minor traffic violators will no doubt receive widespread approval in principle. Details, of course, will have to be spelled out before any firm opinion can be reached either by the authorities or the public.

Mr. Bonner says, "We clutter up our jails and courts with people who are not malefactors in the plain sense of the word" and suggests a treatment at once more sensible and more valuable in fostering a favorable public attitude to law enforcement.

He would have the harmless inebriates sent home and he would set up a system of demerits against minor traffic offenders—a system which could be cumulative so that a persistent violator of the law, even though his violations were of an inconsequential nature, would correct his ways or eventually lose his driving privileges.

Extreme care would, of course, have to be exercised in deciding when a drunk was inoffensive and harmless to himself or others, and when traffic violations were of a nature posing no danger to innocent users of the street or highway. But this new approach deserves serious attention and a trial.

"They're dandelions... Ralph decided to quit fighting them and be NICE to them... pretty, aren't they?"

FROM OTTAWA

Senator Roebuck and Divorce 'Leaks'

SENATOR ROEBUCK's castigation of the newspapers and television may be the answer to a grievance long entertained by members of the Upper House.

Excessive concentration on the elected representatives means, on all too many occasions, that senatorial good works are neglected or inadequately reported. After last week, anyone who ignores the Senate will do so at his own peril. Not only did Mr. Roebuck dominate an extended afternoon press conference, he also at a night session enlivened Senate proceedings with an analysis of human frailty in the newspaper profession which, in the totality of its condemnation, surpassed any recent efforts in the House of Commons. The shock effect is, of course, all the greater when one considers the senator's long record of support for Liberal causes.

The root of Mr. Roebuck's displeasure is the undoubted fact that certain newspapers (and the CBC) forecast the contents of the divorce committee's report while the committee was holding secret sessions. As a co-chairman of the committee the senator was incensed by what he considered a "breach of the privileges of Parliament" and indeed an "action in contempt of Parliament."

Offence Compounded

This offence, apparently, was compounded either by the circumstance that the reports were inaccurate or by reason of the fact that they were too accurate. Thus at one point Mr. Roebuck protested that the report was not in existence when particulars were published on the air and in the press. But he also noted with distress in the same paragraph that "the information was pirated from the committee while in private session, meeting in camera, for the purpose of considering and preparing this report."

As faithfully reported by the newspapers, Mr. Roebuck told the Senate: "To spy on a committee of that kind is very much like eavesdropping on a jury when it is considering its verdict." Apparently, however, the guilt was shared by persons other than the reporters immediately involved. "I want it clearly understood," he said, "that no matter who gives the information away, that institution which publishes information obtained as a result of a violation of a confidence entrusted to someone, is doing so in contempt of Parliament, in breach of the privileges of Parliament and is making the carrying on of the work of Parliament almost impossible."

Despite protests from Senators O'Leary, Walker and Grosart, Mr. Roebuck refused to disclose the identity of the erring newspapers although he did reluctantly admit that he had first heard the report on the CBC. "It is the institution I consider," he said at one point, "not the individuals." The senator insisted (without explanation) that "I am not indicting the press at all."

There are many puzzling aspects of this affair. Divorce is not, after all, a matter involving national security. One would think that newspapers, whetting public interest in the report by apparently well-informed forecasts, were assisting Parliament instead of making its work impossible. In what way has the public interest been irreparably damaged?

Again the matter of privilege is based, according to Mr. Roebuck, on Item 203 of Beauchesne's Third Edition. This says: "It is declared to be a breach of privilege for a member, or any other person, to publish the evidence taken before a select committee, until it has been reported to the House."

But unless the committee's conclusions are "evidence," it is not clear what this has to do with the senator's grievance. The fact is that the evidence was taken in public sessions. It has long since been public property and the subject of comment in newspapers. Moreover, the general views of both majority and minority on the committee—and the detailed views of some members—have been widely known. Even if there had not been a member (if there was one) so far gone in iniquity as to confide in the press, anyone of normal intelligence could surely have based a reasonable forecast of the probable conclusions from what had already been revealed of the power balance on the committee.

A Precedent in the Bay of Pigs?

AN understanding of the Mideast war and its aftermath, contemporary historians here believe, benefits from a comparison between the shattering defeat of Arab forces June 5-10 and the setback the United States sustained in 1961 at the Bay of Pigs in Cuba. There were major differences between the two debacles, but their similarities—particularly as viewed by the sponsoring governments—are striking. In each case, a great power sought to achieve by proxy an important goal of national policy. In each case, inadequate forces were expensively prepared to do the job.

Each of the selected agents failed, with cruel loss of life and serious damage to the equipment and prestige of the sponsor. At the critical moment, each sponsor decided against intervening directly to turn the tide — and was criticized by the agents for this failure.

It now remains to be seen whether the aftermath of the two affairs also runs along parallel lines.

The normal reaction in such circumstances is to try to recoup. It was a measure of the stature of John F. Kennedy that he resisted that temptation.

Chance for Self-Discipline

Russia has not yet shown similar self-discipline.

Her tangible losses have been roughly 100 times as great. The Bay of Pigs could not have cost the CIA much more than tens or scores of millions. The arming of Egypt and Syria ran into the low billions.

Moreover, the prize — the allegiance of the Arab world, with its oil and its strategic waterways — is greater for Moscow than relief from Castro's harassment, however important, was to the United States.

But there is no assurance that the prize can be won at any cost. Like Washington, Moscow got almost as many brickbats from the intended beneficiaries for trying and failing as it would have gotten for not trying at all. This kind of politico-military investment is highly speculative.

Could Imitate Kennedy

So there must be powerful impetus in Moscow to imitate Kennedy and cut losses — meanwhile, of course, seeking to limit the damage already sustained. Kossygin's visit to the UN and to Cuba comes under the clear heading of damage control.

The injury to Russia's position is visible on four major fronts: relations with the West, influence in the communist world, solidarity with the Arabs and vulnerability to Red China.

Letters

Home or Apartment

I fully agree with Douglas Hillside's friend that the cost of houses is too high. Carpenters, for example, cost the contractor close to $40 a day, before he makes his modest profit, and the rest of the building industry, too, seems to think the public have to pay everything they wish to charge, and I don't think the public will — they can't afford to. It is extremely shortsighted of our industry to believe they are a special breed, and must make very much more money than the rest of the world.

However, re your friend's calculation, $50,000 for 25 years in a house versus $36,000 in an apartment — there are many factors to consider.

Rents may go up and increase the $36,000.

At the end of the 25 years, your friend would have a house worth $25,000 to $30,000, due to inflation and rising costs.

So at the end of that time he would be ahead about $9,000 or $10,000 and have a little something he could sell for his old age. It is a form of compulsory saving.

Of course, we mustn't forget the back-breaking hours spent in the garden if he doesn't like gardening. Also, had he invested the money in even bonds at 5 per cent, they would have returned him a saving which would have mitigated his $36,000 apartment rent.

On balance, however, it seems to me that every man is entitled to a house where he can raise his children in peace and privacy and it is too damned bad it cannot be done in a country as prosperous as this. —Home-owner.

The Greatest

Having just returned from three weeks in Ottawa, Quebec, and Expo, may I say although I have seen five World Fairs, Expo is the greatest.

Benches, water fountains, washrooms, picnic areas have been provided in abundance. Once inside Expo, 98 per cent of everything is free. This wonderful combination, unknown in any other world's fair I have seen, enables families of moderate means and elderly people who do need seating, to fully enjoy this great Canadian production.

Imaginative architecture, especially in wooden structures, spacious and tasteful landscaping, a beautiful natural setting in the St. Lawrence combine to leave one satisfied, happy and relaxed. It is possible we owe much of this combination of beauty, thought and comfort to the French influence. —M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra.

This Is Propaganda?

It is unfortunate that Mrs. Grace McCarthy should claim political propaganda in response to the Victoria Low Income Group's appeal. As executive secretary, Mr. Clarkson would naturally discuss the proceedings with the group's representative. The right of the low income group to voice their problem should not be dismissed lightly.

Hopefully, the minister without portfolio, in her wisdom will ponder how a person who has lost initiative, can be "inspired" when he must grapple with a hard to mouth existence amid so much affluence. Perhaps too, she will consider whether or not the precedent set by this group in presenting its own case to government, is not a valuable experience in the democratic process, which would advance their search for "better things" if met with respect, concern and action. —Mary MacKenzie, 1037 Foul Bay.

"DID YOU KNOW THE POLICE CARS RIDE AROUND ALL NIGHT?"

Looking Back

From the Times of July 3, 1907:

Colonel May of Seattle has been making arrangements for the commencement of work at Port Simpson on the proposed Pacific and Hudson's Bay Railway. The route of the new railway would be from Port Simpson, by way of Pine River Pass, to Fort Churchill on the Hudson's Bay.

No charter for the railway has yet been obtained, but the Colonel said he anticipates no trouble in getting one.

Arms Race

● On the Mideast arms race: Kossygin said it was dangerous, and must one day end; limitations could be discussed after Israel withdrew from conquered territories, among the Arabs, even the relatively moderate King Hussein of Jordan was vowing to rearm.

● On direct Arab-Israeli negotiations: Kossygin said they could take place, again after the proposed Israeli withdrawal. No Arab has expressed such a view.

● On recognition of Israel: Kossygin said every people is entitled to independent national statehood. Many Arabs are still talking of driving Israel into the sea.

It may, therefore, develop that — although operations like the Mideast conflict and the Bay of Pigs generate their own momentum, and are not always wholly under the sponsor's control — the Kremlin, too, like Kennedy, will decide to pull back and encourage the quarrelling principals to acquiesce in co-existence.

It was not an ideal solution for Washington in 1961, and would not be ideal for Moscow today. But it may be the best available alternative.

The New Politics of Canada's Second Century

A Younger Generation Is Quietly Deserting The Long-Established Traditional Pattern

By Peter C. Newman

OTTAWA—Few of the events I've covered while reporting Canadian politics over the past decade struck me more forcibly than a minor encounter I had with John Diefenbaker in the lobby of the Empress Hotel in Victoria, during the 1965 election campaign.

He had just been driven back from the Bay Street Armory where he'd given one of the more disjointed speeches in his campaign. The Gallup poll was starting to turn against him, and for once he seemed without that inner confidence which has carried him through a long, harsh lifetime of disappointments.

Newman

For some reason, which isn't clear to me now, we found ourselves waiting together for an elevator to take us up to our rooms. Me, to write a column recording his disastrous performance, and Mr. Diefenbaker, presumably to rest for the next day's certain exertions and possible triumphs.

But the elevator was a long time coming, and we both turned as a gaggle of teen-age girls and their escorts passed us on the way to a high school dance being held in one of the Empress ballrooms.

The Conservative leader tensed a little, half extended his hand in greeting, then drew it back. Here was the best-known, the most controversial politician in the country fighting his most exciting campaign, yet on none of the young faces that passed us had there been a flicker of awe or even of recognition.

Never Touched By His 'Magic'

When the dancing started (this was the Empress Hotel after all, so it wasn't exactly a psychedelic orgy) we watched the young people, pulsating to the rhythm of the big beat. It was then, for one revealing moment, that I thought I saw this man struck by the terrifying realization that these young people (and millions like them) were "fellow Canadians" who would never be touched by his magic. To them, he was already a figure out of the history books.

As he stood there—unposed and staring straight into the camera of history—John Diefenbaker suddenly looked a million years old. The moment passed. The elevator came and his political instincts reasserted themselves, as he bid a warm "How do you do?" to its middle-aged and obviously admiring operator.

This small incident has stuck in my mind, not because it reflected on John Diefenbaker's political obsolescence, but because that brief scenario somehow typified for me what has happened between nearly all of the politicians who now hold down the command posts in this country, and the current generation of Canadian youth.

It's not that there is conflict between the two groups. They just seem to have lost all point of contact. They march to rhythms as different as the electrified guitar I heard that ushered John Diefenbaker into the Victoria armory.

Delicate Balance Being Overturned

You can sense — here in Ottawa and in most of the provincial capitals — a whole generation quietly deserting the established patterns of Canadian politics. The shadowy new political world that is gradually coming into being, threatens to overturn most of the smug assumptions, delicate balances and the closed character of the Canadian political process. But nobody knows what it all means, or what, if anything, can be done about it.

Yet by the time the next general election rolls around (probably in 1969) some 57 per cent of the Canadian population will be under 30 years old. This trend is set and no amount of condescending political rhetoric will make it go away.

Generational rivalry has always been the main engine of political reform, but this new, post-Beatle generation is not merely challenging the authority of its elders in the political context. They are out to set a whole new life style for this hundred year old land. In the process, they are questioning the traditionalist's view of every human exchange, from the sex act to the political rally.

They have struck a new gait, these young radicals without a label. When you enter the country of the young—as I tried briefly to do in the preparation of this series—you stumble into a maze of startling new perceptions about life and politics.

The growing generation gap which is so worrying the politicians is not based on differences in chronological age alone. What forms, a generation, what provides its perceptions, gives urgency to its expectations and generates its drive for power is some deeply shared, common experience.

It was the mud and blood of the First World War and the soup lines of the great Depression that shaped the impulses of the Diefenbaker-Pearson era of politicians, and it was both the horrors and the glories of the Second World War which provided the central, formative episode of the political generation which followed.

Two Different Change Sources

But the generational change now in process flows from two quite different sources. It is based on the combined effects of the communications explosion (by 1970 our population will be 50 per cent higher than in 1952 the year Canadian television started) and the simultaneously rapid process of urbanization which has changed the face of Canada.

The accompanying revolution in all phases of technology has upended most traditional patterns of thought and behavior. This quantum jump in social change, according to Timothy Reid, a lecturer in economics at Toronto's York University, means that "Canada has entered a new era, whose human requirements are as different from those of the industrial age as those of the industrial age were different from the agricultural age."

Won't Accept The Old Ethic

What really sets apart the new generation of Canadians today is that they no longer subscribe to or live by the Protestant Ethic—a view of existence which until very recently has been the dominating streak of the English-Canadian character.

Quite apart from its religious connotations, the Protestant Ethic stressed all the somber virtues, such as the satisfaction of a hard day's work well done. It worshipped moderation, not just as a safe course between extremes, but as the

The younger generation of Canadians does not oppose or support the older generation of politicians—men such as the NDP's M. J. Coldwell, the Conservative's John Diefenbaker and the Liberal's Lester Pearson. They simply consider them too irrelevant to comment. The most frequently heard complaint about Canadian politicians is that they are so old.

one essential ingredient in social change and political action.

It provided the philosophical roots for the "small l" liberalism which has dominated Canadian politics during the past five decades.

This is the very notion which is now being rejected by the young. "Liberal democratic traditions have become liberal democratic ceremonies; they have lost their meaning," says Douglas Ward, the 28-year-old president of the Canadian Union of Students. "Governments are now made up of people sitting around, deciding what are the most minor adjustments they can make to keep in power."

Loose Approach To Life, Politics

Having shed the reflexes of "small l" liberalism, the vanguard of the new political generation has substituted what they call "the hang-loose ethic." It's an approach to life and politics that combines irreverence, tolerance and spontaneity with the pursuit of raw experience.

"This generation," writes Marshall McLuhan, its chief prophet, "lives mystically and in depth."

Near universal higher education (whether it's at universities or technical schools) has meant that for the first time, campus values are setting the tone and tempo for a whole generation. Most university students of previous generations felt they were putting in an apprenticeship for the adult world.

Apprenticeship Is Rejected

"There's a real rejection of this apprenticeship notion going on," says Arthur Pape, the youthful director of research for the Company of Young Canadians, "because we reject the kind of society we've been asked to be apprenticed into."

"Instead of just studying and writing essays, university students are concerned about action projects in which they're not just apprentices but citizens putting their life on the line," echoes Ward of the CSU. "We've got to take hold of ourselves and transform the university community into a place where there's dignity; if we don't have dignity for ourselves, we won't ever give it to anybody else."

Pape, Ward and most activists of their generation feel that it's a waste of time to spend 20 years working yourself into a position of power within any organization. By then, they believe, the individual has so compromised himself that he has no power left to affect changes, only the power to sustain the status quo.

While this issue-transcending approach to life doesn't lend itself to ideological definition, there is a movement both here and in the United States, loosely labelled the "New Left," which has helped to mobilize the generation's political involvement.

Essentially, the New Left is concerned with the value of human community in the technological age. It's an attempt to bind together the strands of common experience and purpose, affection and respect which tie men to their fellows; the bold beginnings of a bid to restore truly participatory democracy in North America. The New Left flatly rejects the idea that this can be achieved through the established political order or existing parliamentary or congressional institutions.

"The New Left," says Pape who is a leading member of the Student Union for Peace Action, which is the movement's main Canadian outgrowth, "brought to this country the notion of the outdoor demonstration, which the trade union movement hadn't used for a long time. These demonstrations are important in loosening up the country, giving people the notion that they have a right to speak out, to be angry, to be opposed."

See Little Hope In Old Parties

Few young people can see any hope of their generation effectively organizing itself through the youth wings of the Liberal, Conservative or NDP Parties. For now, at least, they prefer to try and develop issues around which citizens can mobilize themselves.

"The politicians we have are not trying to recreate the country in any sense," says Ward. "Democracy can only be revitalized through the reorganizing of communities. We're going to have to re-establish somehow groups in communities that are small enough to meet and articulate local concerns, and yet large enough to exercise some leverage."

One of the marks of any new generation is the identity of its political heroes, and it's significant that no politician—Canadian or American—seems to fill this exalted position at the moment.

Voiced Disdain For Pomposity

John F. Kennedy probably came closest, not because of any particular accomplishment but because he voiced the disquiet of contemporary America, characterized the disdain for pomposity and the impatience with the pieties of another age.

Senator Robert Kennedy has inherited some of this glamor, but Lester Pearson, John Diefenbaker and Tommy Douglas are generally considered too irrelevant to merit much comment. The most frequently heard complaint about Canadian politicians is that they're so old. Canada has not, in fact, been governed by a man under 60 since 1930, when Mackenzie King (then 56) was defeated by R. B. Bennett.

But this has not always been true. Eight of the 12 men who preceded Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker into the prime ministership took office at much earlier ages. The young generation believes that Canada is ready for a prime minister in his early forties; though at the moment they don't seem to have any particular candidate in mind.

If the new generation has few identifiable heroes, there's little doubt who has become its chief political villain. He is Lyndon B. Johnson who symbolizes all that is wrong with North American life.

Youths' Insight A Big Question

"The most important question of my generation," says Pape, "will be its response to the post-Johnson period, which will not be anywhere near as obvious or as brutal. It's easy enough to react politically to the obscurities of the American empire under Johnson, but whether our generation will have the insight to see through the more sophisticated, technocratic group of guys who follow Johnson, that's the big question. And it will decide the future of Canada."

In assessing the temper of the new generation, most older politicians dismiss its extreme fringes, because of such phenomenon as the spreading use of LSD and other psychedelic drugs. But in the view of other, more contemporary minded Canadians, LSD is only a symptom of a deeper problem, still not understood.

One of the few politicians who has done some basic research into both the medical

"These same youngsters who cause us anguish today with their LSD trips," he says, "would have learned in four months to fly Spitfires a generation ago. They would have gladly risked their lives to protect our freedom. But today they have no great cause, no adventurous challenges. With our Canadian affluence, and instinct for what is trite politically, we can barely communicate with them."

Politics Always Those of the Old

"Our politics are the politics of the old, and always have been. Maybe this is as it should be, but our basic assumptions are never overhauled except in time of trouble. Our youth may be warming up to give us a stormy time."

The social passions of the young are alert to change. It will take either an inspiring new leader or some great national issue to reorganize the constellation of political forces in this country in a way which will re-involve the "hang-loose" generation in the essential task of Canadian nation building.

Surprise visit to Europe by the Hon. John Gilbey

Entraining for an unannounced visit to Europe, the Hon. John Gilbey tells of his responsibilities as Gilbey's International Quality Controller.

"My gin has been the best gin in the world for no less than 110 years," says the Hon. John Gilbey. "I am going to Europe to make sure that the European Gilbey's London Dry matches the original English standards. I expect to find the subtle flavour that people call... the perfect balance for mixed drinks."

Since Gilbey's International Quality Controller doesn't want elaborate arrangements made for his European visit, he kept his plans to himself. Next time you see Gilbey's famous frosty bottle, remember the Hon. John Gilbey and his job as Gilbey's International Quality Controller. When you see the gin with the perfect balance for mixed drinks, bear in mind his proud words: "This is my gin. For no less than 110 years it has carried my family's name. Gilbey's London Dry is the gin with the perfect balance for mixed drinks. And I shall make sure it stays that way."

Cleric Blasts Philip For Business Stand

LONDON (CP)—Canon John Collins, former leader of Britain's ban-the-bomb movement, criticized Prince Philip from the pulpit of St. Paul's Cathedral Sunday for saying moral considerations should take second place to business interests.

Fifth Year Of Violence

LAKE GENEVA, Wis. (AP)—Thousands of youths hurled beer bottles and fireworks at police Sunday in a second night of violence in this southern Wisconsin resort city.

Windows were broken, parking meters ripped loose, and police stoned in the three-hour uprising.

Lake Geneva police refused to disclose how many youths had been arrested, but estimates from other authorities placed the figure above 100 for the two nights.

National guardsmen were mobilized at an armory, but did not enter Lake Geneva.

Three times police pushed the milling crowd of youths back into a lakeside park in efforts to shield downtown businesses before bringing the outbreak under control early today.

Lake Geneva, 75 miles northwest of Chicago, has been a mecca for restless youths who have exploded in July 4 holiday disturbances for five straight years.

where overseas trade is concerned. The canon said in his sermon that if the prince really meant what he said to the Institute of Marketing last Wednesday, "then let the churches openly, firmly and categorically repudiate his views as inconsistent with the Christian gospel."

"Let the churches tell him it would have been far better for Britain and the world had he kept silent."

In his marketing address, Philip was reported to have said:

"Making moral judgments about the government of other nations is an expensive luxury. Insulting or patronizing comments on the behavior of foreign nations, and an unsympathetic approach to other people's problems are resented as much abroad as we resent them when they refer to us."

"Anyone who has tried to market abroad will tell you how much his success depends upon the general atmosphere, and how easy it is to change trust and good will into suspicion and resentment."

Babies Starve to Death in House

DETROIT (AP)—Two baby girls starved to death not far from the bodies of their parents, who died in an apparent murder-suicide in their Detroit home last week.

Only the family dog was left alive when police entered the house.

Police said Charles Rodanhisler, 24, a postal employee, had apparently killed his wife with a shotgun and then turned the weapon on himself.

The two children, Theresa, 17 months, and Sheryl, four months, were not harmed but were left to die of starvation in the locked home.

The body of the older child was seen lying on the kitchen floor by Mrs. Julian Rodanhisler who went to her son's home to find out why no one had answered the phone for more than a week.

The house is set well back from the street and the yard is surrounded by dense shrubbery.

Neighbors said they suspected nothing because they were not accustomed to seeing movements in the house because of the shrubbery.

Police said some neighbors did recall they heard what sounded like shots a week ago Thursday or Friday and what may have been a baby crying a few days later.

CAN FEED HUNGRY AS WELL AS THEMSELVES

Hippies Have Opportunity To Prove Their Love Talk

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Separate news items, printed in this paper on two different days last week, concerned food donations.

They were widely different in their presentation and concept.

Yet, if you studied them long enough, you couldn't help but draw a parallel between the two.

The first said there had been a slowdown in donations for the free food stall which has filled a need at the end of each month in low-income families and pensioners' homes for many years.

Donations for the June 24 stall were so few it was necessary to close by 10:30 that morning.

Second item, printed two days later, described a group named The Diggers, formed to collect food for hungry hippies.

They were making the rounds each day. Their means of transportation was a Victoria Youth Council van and they were receiving food in quantity from individuals, stores and other likely places. A four-column picture gave ample proof of the truth of these statements.

This volunteer collecting agency was proving so successful its originators were thinking they might stage a series of "feed ins" at public places. They would collect the food, it was said, bring it to one spot and feed everyone who was hungry.

If you compare the two stories, as many a thinking person has already done, you cannot help wondering of the scrounging of these "young social opt-outs," as one of their own number labels them, has not been a big reason for the failure of the free food stall to find necessary supplies to last out one day.

In a city the size of Victoria there cannot be enough outlets of the kind that offer free food donations, to service two widely separate groups—especially when one group is skimming the cream in a daily round of calls.

By their own words these young hippies say they come "from middle class homes where money has been plentiful."

They boast that they have voluntarily rejected that image and all that money can give them. Therefore, if they are hungry, it is of their own volition.

In the case of pensioners and low income families, it is a different matter. Money is never plentiful in their homes. Children do not have all it can buy. Older people have little or no funds.

Food is especially scarce in that time between the spending of the last few cents of the current allowance at the end of a month and the coming of the next allowance.

The free food stall has always been able to help bridge that gap. It is an established donation centre. In the past it has been liberally supported by merchants, individuals and farmers. It should continue to be supported.

As I understand it the hippy creed is to love everyone. They don't want to work "to make lots of money." They wish to exist for love and to give all people that which will make them happy.

With this in mind, I wonder how The Diggers would react to a suggestion that, in their zeal to feed the hungry, they seek out those who conduct the free food stall and offer to set aside one or two days at the end of each month to help service this stall.

It is quite evident that if they are making the rounds each day they will have plenty of contacts. They also have a van.

According to their own statements—they are not interested in working for money, they are only concerned in working for love.

Here would be a splendid opportunity to prove it. If the offer was accepted they would still receive all the benefits of donations throughout the month—except for the one or two days set aside to help the food stall.

With such a project the hippy image, in time, would appear a little brighter. Who knows? We might even begin to believe it when they say... I love you!

CANADIANS PROTEST ATTITUDE ON VIETNAM

MONTREAL (CP)—About 1,800 demonstrators from across Canada marched through downtown Montreal Saturday carrying placards, banners, and even a coffin to protest what was called Canada's part in the Vietnam war.

The six-hour demonstration included a speech from Laurier Lapierre of McGill University, calling for Canadian independence and neutrality, and a skit by Montreal's Living Theatre that ended with an actor dressed as a United States marine machine-gunning the other performers.

The demonstration was organized by a group calling itself the July 1 Mobilization Committee, and another from Toronto named the Co-ordinating Committee to End the War in Vietnam.

It began with folk songs and a mock ceremony renaming downtown Dominion Square as "Dependence Square," followed by a procession stretching out for eight blocks, with local police, some in riot helmets, stationed along the route.

About half the demonstrators dispersed after they reached east-end Lafontaine Park, approximately a mile from Dominion Square.

Leukin Robinson, chairman of the Toronto committee, told the remaining audience of about 1,000: "We cannot in good conscience celebrate our national holiday while being party to the destruction of another nation."

Hiram Walker's Crystal Gin.

The one made for
mixers.

Whether partying, or serving drinks, Canadians are good mixers. And we like to serve gin with good mixers, from tonic and ginger ale to fruit juices and vermouths.

So the gin right for good mixers must have the right amount of flavour, bouquet and dryness to stand up in some drinks and sit back in others.

Hiram Walker's Crystal is the gin made for good mixers. Like you and you. And you and you.

Steady Pace Pays For Spokane Ace

Marnell Lone City 'Champ'

Don Marnell salvaged a share in one title for Victoria Sunday at the Racquet Club as Vancouver players dominated finals of the Pacific regional junior tennis championships.

Competing in the under-18 section of the 12-event tourney, Marnell teamed with Vancouver's Danny Forsythe to take the doubles crown with a 6-3, 9-7 victory over the Vancouver pair of Dave Johnston and Mark Tindle.

Earlier, Marnell had dropped a 6-3, 6-4 decision to Johnston in the singles final.

Another Victorian, Pat Skilling, who was eliminated in the semi-final round of the under-18 singles, partnered Mike Bolton of Vancouver to reach the doubles final only to lose to the Vancouver pair of Paul Paillet and Trevor Stubbs, 5-7, 6-1, 6-2.

Gulka's Quartet 'Spiel Champions'

Visiting and Victoria foursomes shared the honors in Esquimalt's annual mid-summer bonspiel, but the main curling prize "stayed home."

Main event honors went to a Victoria Club crew skipped by Harry Gulka following a final victory over another city rink skipped by Al Peace.

Supporting Gulka in the rink's unbeaten march were Corky Davies, Ken Chysyk and Gail Chysyk.

Gus McDonald, calling the turn for wife Pat and Jack and Kim Sumpton, carried the other local entry to victory — defeating Jack Moir's Esquimalt rink in the "C" event final.

Harris Loy of North Shore captured "B" event honors, defeating Duncan's Gary Merritt, and Duncan's Harvey Hodges beat clubmate Bert Oud in the "D" final.

"A" EVENT
1. Harry Gulka, Corky Davies, Ken and Gail Chysyk (Victoria).
2. Al Peace, Peter Graham, Roy Van Metre, Alvin Graham (Victoria).
3. Glen Harper, Vera Wilson, Byr Wilson, Marg Harper (Duncan).
4. Clarence McLean, Paulie Doran, Carl Gieson, Mabel Gieson (Fort Alberni).

"B" EVENT
1. Harris Loy, Thale Wilson, Hugh Wilson, Ethel Wilson (North Shore).
2. Gary Merritt, Alice and Don Blom, Judy Merritt (Duncan).
3. George Groat, Doug May, Shirley Groat, Joyce May (Victoria).
4. Wally Kovalski, Mike Mergens, Myron Barge, Diane Mergens (Esquimalt).

DECISIVE winner in return match for his world lightweight boxing crown Saturday was Carlos Ortiz (above) of Puerto Rico. Ortiz stopped Ullinini "Sugar" Ramos of Mexico in fourth round. In earlier bout Ortiz won when referee stopped fight in fifth round because of cut over Ramos' eye.

The tortoise beat the rabbit in the Billy Foster Championship 100 Saturday night at Western Speedway.

Persistent Norm Ellefson, former Edmontonian now living in Spokane, seemed to be only plodding when Victoria's Al Smith played the role of the rabbit early in the race to the delight of 5,000 fans.

But the Spokane ace kept up the chase and finally inherited the lead on the 32nd lap to win the Canadian American Grand Prix. The first American Grand Prix staged to set up an education fund for the three children of Billy Foster.

Foster, a former CAMRA driver and two-time competitor at the Indianapolis 500, was killed last February at Riverside, Calif., when his late model stock car slammed into a wall.

Ellefson was followed by Jerry Lundgren of Spokane, Wash., who made his first appearance at the Langford oval. Vancouver's Ralph Monahay placed third.

Blistering Start

But the hard-charging Smith, who has been the victim of more mechanical failures in CAMRA races than he cares to remember, provided the excitement.

Starting 17th in the field of 22 modifieds, the local leadfoot thundered past a dozen cars before the first-lap leader had entered the second turn.

Smith was a collecting lap money on the fifth circuit while Ellefson was caught in early traffic jams.

His margin grew to a quarter of a lap, then half a lap, before he got boxed in behind Eldon Rassmussen, another Edmonton driver.

This gave Ellefson a chance to slowly begin closing the gap. Soon he was whiffing Smith's exhaust fumes and the $500 purse.

On the 48th lap he nipped in front of Smith going into a turn but the charging Victorian nudged the rear of Ellefson's chariot, forcing him to spin out.

The unexpected detour cost Ellefson the lead and left him half a lap behind again.

Chunking Trouble
But the tortoise wouldn't quit although the rabbit was hopping comfortably in front of the CAMRA point leader.

Then it happened. Smith's right rear tire started chunking (throwing off bits of rubber) forcing him to slow down, 20 laps from victory.

Ellefson caught him and went on to win easily. Smith managed to place fourth, finishing the race with a tire worn down to the fabric.

Rassmussen, who placed ninth, was out of contention in the early going. Three cars spun out in front of him and he was forced to leave the track — a manoeuvre that cost him more than a lap.

The Edmonton driver, who now has a United States Auto Club competition ticket, was given special permission to come here from Indianapolis for the race.

Saturday's race contributed $700 to the fund established to educate the popular driver's three children. It got a $4,000 boost when Foster's fellow USAC drivers raffied off a motorcycle prior to last May's Indy 500.

PIT STOPS:
Smith was one of three drivers who clocked in under 17 seconds in time trials... he turned one lap in 16:32 but it wasn't the fastest... Monahay was clocked in 16:33... only two 100ths of a second off the record set in 1965 by Denver's Jim Malley.

Malley and Rassmussen were timed in 16:37... Although Smith didn't win, he picked up most of the lap money, including bonuses of $7 on the seventh lap and $20 on the 27th lap that were contributed by fans... he also picked up 76 points to Ellefson's 70 in a CAMRA race in Langley Sunday by placing third in a trophy dash, third in a heat and third in the main event... Smith is now second in CAMRA standings.

Results:
Fast Time — Ralph Monahay, Vancouver, 16:33.
Trophy dash — 1. Gerry Lundgren, Boise; 2. Al Smith, Victoria; 3. Eldon Rassmussen, Edmonton; 4. J. J. Barker, Vancouver.
First heat — Ron Tolwell, Boise, Idaho; 2. Warren Culver, Boise; 3. Jim Barker, Vancouver.
Second heat — Bud Gorder, Spokane; 1. John McPherson, Bremerton; 4. J. J. Barker, Vancouver.
Fast heat — Norm Ellefson, Spokane; 2. Al Smith; 3. Mac McTasart, Spokane; 4. Eldon Rassmussen.
Main event — 1. Ellefson; 2. Lundgren; 3. Monahay; 4. Smith.

YOUNGEST player (22) to win the U.S. women's national open golf championship is Catherine Lacoste of France (above). She stood off rain, pressure and rash of five straight runs of one-over-par for winning score of 294, two strokes better than Susie Maxwell and Beth Stone, both of Oklahoma.

Alberni Upsets Cosmos

Alberni, Victoria's Evening Optimist All-Stars and a combined Ladysmith-Chemainus team all chalked up crucial first-round victories Sunday in the Vancouver Island Babe Ruth baseball championships.

The double-knockout tournament at Reynolds Road Park resumed with two games today. Duncan and the Cosmos met in a losers' bracket playoff this afternoon while Ladysmith-Chemainus tangled with the Evening Optimists in a winners' bracket game at 6.

Other games will be played throughout the week until the finals are reached Saturday.

Alberni punched two of their three hits in the fifth inning to nip Cosmopolitan League reps 2-1. A fine, three-hitter by Glen Copp carried Ladysmith-Chemainus to a 3-1 triumph over Lake Cowichan. The host Evening Optimists tripped Duncan 8-3.

Successful home runs by Graham Lee and Jim Hunter in the fifth inning wrapped up the victory for Optimists' Doug Curran.

LIONS OPEN TRAINING

SUNNY SUNDAY WORK DAY

By HAL MALONE
How did YOU spend Sunday?
Soaking up sun? Swimming in the lake? Doing nothing? Well, some play and some work and did the B.C. Lions work Sunday.
An hour after they pulled into Royal Roads, the Lions, 57 strong (a few of them too strong in the weight department) slid into their padded haberdashery and moved out onto the lower field.
For an hour and 10 minutes they labored under the broiling sun.
The tempo steps up today and every day (except Sunday). Coach Dave Skrien and aides Ron Morris, Tony Knap, Al Evans and Lorne Davies, will put the 1967 edition of the Lions through drills at 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily.

The morning works are closed to the public; the afternoon sessions are open.
Skrien's class of 60 was cut when quarterback Jim McKen and fullback Fred Sosa withdrew their services. The roster dropped by one more when tackle Billy Hull, recuperating from a recent operation on his knees, was placed on the injured reserve list.
A gathering of 150 watched the first workout, focussed attention on quarterback Bernie Faloney and halfback Jim Young.

Faloney came to the Lions in the trade which sent lineman Mike Webster to Montreal. Young, hailed as one of the finest Canadians in pro football, joined B.C. in the deal for Willie Fleming.
The plethora of new faces (29 including Faloney who is not precisely new to football) prompted a constant buzz of "Who's HE?"
There are 31 imports (U.S. citizens) in camp, only half of whom can be retained under the quaint Canadian Football League rule designed to protect strong, healthy Canadian talent.

Gone are a host of familiar faces. Joe Kapp (suspended), Willie Fleming, Tom Hinton, Pat Clardige, all retired.
If the old Lions miss Courtenay, their old training grounds, it didn't show.
Said Dennis Veitch, Lions' general manager, of Royal Roads: "You can't beat this anywhere."
The Lions fly to Everett Sunday for an exhibition game with Edmonton Eskimos.
Until then it's run, block, tackle... and sweat.

Putting, Good and Bad, Forces Playoff in Open

MONTREAL (CP)—Veterans Art Wall and Billy Casper meet today in an 18-hole playoff to decide the 1967 Canadian Open golf championship after Wall lost a two-stroke lead on Sunday's final hole.

Casper forced today's showdown round when he sank a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th green.

Wall appeared to have the $30,000 first-place money sewed up.

The playoff was scheduled this afternoon at the Municipal course. It will be televised nationally by the CBC from 7:30 to 9 p.m. and in the U.S. from 8 to 9 p.m. by CBS.

Wall has been in eight previous playoffs dating back to 1963 and has emerged as the winner in five of them. Casper's extra-hole efforts have won him two of four.

ELEMENT OF PRESSURE

"I had two things going for me on 18," Casper said. "I knew that if I made that putt I was in second all alone and if Art missed his—and the pressure would be on him—playoff would be necessary."

As it turned out the pressure was there and both completed the 72 holes with 279.

Casper came in with a rush after being almost anonymous throughout the first three rounds. He was fresh from an eight-foot birdie putt at the treacherous par-three 17th hole before his 12-footer on 18.

Casper honed-out respectable rounds of 69, 70, 71 and 69 for his 279, while Wall had an opening round four-under-par 67, two 70s and Sunday's dreary 72 for his total.

Wall had staved off determined bids by Steve Reid and Jack Nicklaus before succumbing to Casper's charge.

Casper started the day three strokes off Wall's pace, but proceeded to set off a series of three birdies and six pars on the back nine.

Al Geiberger found himself $7,500 richer. He fired a 281.

EMOTIONAL GREETING
Casper's unexpected finish brought an emotional reaction from his young son: The boy rushed to the green and embraced his father with tears streaming down his face.

Top Canadian was Montreal's Adrien Bigras, who joined Australia's Bob Stanton, Wes Ellis, Dave Marr, Dale Douglass and South Africa's Allen Henning and Roberto De Vicenzo of Argentina at 285. They each won $2,714.

Winnipeg's Wilf Homenuik earned himself $300 for surviving the 36-hole cut and finished with 281 for the four rounds. The only other Canadian left in the running was amateur champ Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont. The veteran Weslock carded a 294.

Bill Wakeham of Victoria shot a 73 Thursday, 73 Friday and missed the 36-hole cutoff.

An official of the Royal Canadian Golf Association estimated that the crowds on hand over the four-day regulation rounds had reached 72,000 before Sunday's mid-day storm.

Nicklaus said Saturday that the gallery had proven to be one of the best he had faced in recent months.

279-A. Wall, B. Casper (winner of playoff to receive $30,000, loser to receive $15,000).
280-B. Boros, J. Nicklaus, S. Reid.
281-B. Ellis, R. Stanton, A. Bigras, P. Marr, A. Henning, De Vicenzo, Douglass, $2,714.

Merger Up to Rivals

(Times News Services)

The United States Soccer Football Association's 51st annual national convention ended Sunday in Cleveland, leaving merger between the National Association and the National Professional League entirely up to those two professional groups.

Feeling among delegates appeared to be that once a merger is accomplished, the NPSL clubs would be granted sanction by the USSFA on the same basis as was the USSFA of $25,000 for each club plus 10 per cent of live television fees and four per cent of gate receipts.

The USSFA treasury report at the three-day meeting reflected the sanction fee from the USSFA. The report showed assets of $1,270,940.

BAILEY'S BID FAILS

No Snap in Track or in Mile Mark

TORONTO (CP)—An attempt by Canada's top middle-distance runners to break the four-minute barrier for the one-mile race fell about one second short Saturday because of a dead track.

The track was left soggy by late afternoon showers.

Dave Bailey of Toronto, the only Canadian to run a mile in under four minutes, won the event and established a mark of 4:01 for a Canadian running in Canada.

"I think I could have gone in less than four if the track was hard," Bailey said.

Irene Piotrowski and Harry Jerome, both of Vancouver, George Puce of Toronto, who now lives in Reno, Nev., Bill Greenough of Halifax and Nancy McCredie of Brampton were all double winners in the Dominion Day meet that featured most of the team that will represent Canada in the Pan-American Games at Winnipeg later this month.

"When the track is fast, you can feel your spikes digging into it," said Bailey, whose Canadian record of 3:59.4 was set at San Diego last year.

"There's a snap you can hear when your toes bite into it." Meet officials had endeavored to have a Canadian break the four-minute barrier at the meet. Half-miler Bill Crothers of Markham, Ont., had entered in an attempt to force the pace.

Crothers chased Bailey for three of the four laps before dropping back to finish fourth. "The early pace was good," Bailey said. "I usually run the first half slower than the final half."

Ray Haswell of Edmonton finished second, about 20 yards behind Bailey.

Miss Piotrowski won the women's 100-yard and the 220-yard events. Her times of 10.8 and 24.5 were both off the Canadian native and open records.

Jerome, who missed the Pan-Am Trials in Saskatoon last weekend because of injured muscles, won the men's 100- and 220-yard races handsily. His times of 9.5 and 21.8 were also well off his best times, both Canadian native and open records.

Puce won the men's discus with a throw of 188 feet, four inches, and the shot put with 60 feet, 8 1/2 inches. Dave Steen of Toronto and Burnaby, B.C., was a runner-up in both events.

Greenough, a native of Milltown, N.B., jumped 22-11 1/2 to win the long jump and 49 feet to win the triple jump. Michel Charland of Montreal was second in the long jump, while Barry Johnson of Trail, B.C., was runner-up in the triple jump.

Miss McCredie put the shot 48-1 and threw the discus 140-7 to become a double winner.

Bob McLaren of Victoria won the men's 440-yard hurdles on three-tenths of a second off the Canadian Open and native record of 52.2.

VICTORIA'S McLAREN SIZZLES

Rocks' Goalie Out for Two

Barry Forbes has a possible dislocated shoulder. Billy Gray has a bad foot gash. And Dave Unwin has a headache.

Forbes will miss Victoria Shamrocks' next two Inter-City Lacrosse League games. The Rocks play a home-and-home series this week with Vancouver. They'll be at Vancouver on Tuesday, in Memorial Arena Wednesday.

Knocked flying by New Westminster's Wayne Shuttleworth last week, Forbes' right arm is puffed from elbow to shoulder.

THOMPSON CALLED

To replace him Wednesday at Memorial Arena, coach Urwin has called up standby George Thompson. George Greyer will backup Thompson.

Gary sliced his right foot open on oyster shells while practicing in the surf off Parksville on the weekend. He will not play Wednesday.

"Apart from Barry and Billy I think we survived the holiday weekend in fair shape," Unwin said.

To replace Gray, Unwin will call on Glen Vickers. The chunky forward has been working out regularly with the team.

The double injuries come at a bad time for Shamrocks. Coquitlam Adanacs moved into second place, one point behind Victoria Saturday, by defeating Vancouver 13-9.

CRUCIAL POINTS

Vancouver trails Victoria by four digits. A double win would give Victoria an eight-point bulge over Vancouver. A double loss would put the mainlanders back on even footing with Victoria.

Adanacs received a sterling performance from goalkeeper Merv Schweitzer in putting down Vancouver. The A's took a three-goal lead in the first period and had little trouble staying in front.

John Allen led the winners with three goals.

Alec Carey, Gord Gimple, Mike Gates and Rod Kilduff added two each.

Century Nipped In Final Clash

Tom Kjoslo wielded a big bat and sparked afield Sunday to lead Seattle Westgate Builders to a 5-4, extra-inning victory over Victoria's Century Inn in the final game of the Stuffy McGinnis Softball League's holiday tournament at Heywood Park.

Art's Bat Spree Powers Workers

Awesome hitting by veteran Art Worth powered first-place Transport Workers to a two-game Senior Amateur Baseball League sweep over Lake Cowichan Saturday at Lake Cowichan.

The two Transport victories, combined with Graves Movers' split at Lake Cowichan Sunday, gave the Workers a game and a half lead on the second-place Movers.

Worth batted seven for eight and drove in five runs during the Saturday twin bill. He stroked three singles in four trips to help Bob Mabey record an 11-0, three-hit win over Cowichan in the first contest.

Worth hit even better during Transport's 12-6 second-game win. He lashed two singles and a double and pulled Larry Paradis' inside curve over the right-field wall for a two-run homer.

Worth's circuit blast would have been the first of the season but for teammate Gord Strongman's inside-the-park homer in the first game.

Pitcher Les Brice sparked in Greaves' 3-2 win in extra innings Sunday. Brice held Cowichan scoreless for nine innings and scored the winning run on a passed ball after singling in the tenth.

Late Charge by Munn Makes It Four Straight

COWICHAN—Vancouver professional Dick Munn, one-time pro at Victoria's Cedar Hill, and Len Holman, a 17-handicapper from Lake Cowichan, charged off with the main prizes in a pair of tournaments at the Cowichan Golf Club.

Ring in birdie puts on two of the final three holes, Munn won his fourth consecutive tournament Saturday by claiming top money in the annual Cowichan Open.

Holman won the 27-hole handicap tournament on Sunday, although sharing some of the spotlight with southpaw Clive Walton of Cowichan. Holman's net total of 101½ was four better than Bill Clayton of Gorge Vale. Another Gorge member, junior Ken Kulai, was third with a 106 net.

SIZZLING NINE

Walton won Sunday's low gross prize, mainly on the strength of a sizzling, three-under-par 33 on his second nine. His other nines — 43 and 40 — gave him a 116 total, two strokes ahead of Kulai, Bud Syrotuck and Murray Barber, both of Nanaimo.

Syrotuck, on the strength of his closing nine, won the runner-up gross prize.

But the round of the day, and perhaps the weekend, was Walton's 33. The six-handicapper was three-under despite a bogey and double bogey on his card.

He also scored an eagle (on the 8th), five birdies and one par. Munn, birding a three-under par 72-69-71, bested our Cowichan veteran, Gordie Whan, 71-71-142, for the honors Saturday.

Amateur Al MacLeod of Gorge Vale was third, 69-74-143.

15 UNDER PAR

MacLeod led the field — one stroke ahead of Whan and two ahead of Munn — heading into the final nine. But Munn birdied the 34th and 35th holes and finished with a par on the 36th and last hole to win $100.

It maintained a torrid win streak by the former Victorian. He is 15 under par for his last six competitive 18-hole rounds!

Munn's streak started when he won the 18-hole Cedar Hill Open with a five-under 60. He was four under (establishing a course record of 70) in a 36-hole meet at Hope and two weeks ago won the Quilchena pro-am at Vancouver with a three-under 69.

Wrigley Field Swept By Mass Hysteria

CHICAGO (AP) — Mass hysteria is sweeping ancient Wrigley Field these days and the only guy it doesn't seem to bother is Ferguson, Jenkins, the Canadian-born right-hander who wants to become a millionaire.

A crowd of 40,464 not only cheered every move the Chicago Cubs made Sunday, but also played the game of "scoreboard."

Everytime New York Mets scored a run against St. Louis Cardinals, the crowd let out a deafening roar. And when the Cubs scored, they cheered so loud and long that the Cub game was held up momentarily.

The Cards regained a share of first place by downing the Mets 3-1 in the second game.

"I couldn't swing the bat one time when they cheered," laughed Ron Santo. "I just froze and darned if it wasn't a big fat pitch."

"Unbelievable," said Billy Williams. "They actually gave me goose bumps."

Long after the game was over, the crowd hung around the dressing room chanting "We want Leo. We want Leo."

"They're not going to get me out there," said manager Leo Durocher. "The only time I've seen like this was when Bobby Thomson hit the homer to win the pennant for the Giants in 1951."

The crowd had everyone hopped up except Jenkins, the Chatham, Ont. native, who calmly hurled the Cubs to their sixth straight victory and 13th in the last 14 games as he notched his 11th triumph against five defeats.

Jenkins allowed only three hits and contributed a run-scoring triple and a double.

Jenkins, who came to the Cubs from Philadelphia Phillies as a relief pitcher last year, became a starter late in 1966 and won his last four games. He's going along with pitching coach Joe Becker who tells his corps "stick with me and I'll make you a millionaire."

That's what he tells me and I'm going along with him," laughed Jenkins. "He says two good years and then you get the big money. I'm the kind of guy who really needs it. I'm sure trying for it and this winning becomes fun. The way we're going, we might even win the pennant."

Two Victoria drivers and one Berry, driving a '67 Corvette, won the street eliminator.

Don Hackwood of Nanaimo topped the super-stock eliminator bracket with his '67 Fairlane while Duncaik's Einar Hansen, in a '64 Falcon, led the stock eliminator event.

Class winners were: Chris Tickell, Joe Chalelain, Doug Murray and Wayne Roberts, all of Nanaimo.

Bruce Kissinger, M. D. McDonald, Ken Henderson, Ron O'Brien (2), Gary Hunge, Bob Goy, Brian Westby, Vic Henderson, Mel Butler, Tony Berry and Dave Thompson, all of Victoria.

Favored Ribocco Wins Derby With Late Rush

DUBLIN (AP) — Ribocco came with a late rush and won the Irish Sweepstakes Derby from Sucaryl Saturday, grabbing a race that is followed breathlessly by fans in more than 100 countries.

Ribocco won by one length and landed a first prize of $211,008 for Charles Engelhard, a Newark, N.J., industrialist.

Lions Tackle Colony After Two-Hit Victory

Now that the warm weather's here, veteran pitcher Dennis Beaulac may wind up firing a little steam into Red Lion entry in the Senior Men's Softball League.

Lions' playing-coach insists his squad "will make the playoffs" and backed it up Friday with a fine, two-hit shutout over Moisons. The score: 1-0.

Lloyd Hanna's two-out double followed by Doug Wilson's single to left scored the game's Mrs. John F. Kennedy, widow of the U.S. president, was among the 60,000 spectators and let out a whoop when Ribocco finished first. She admitted later that she had bet on both the winner and on Dartboard, the third-place finisher.

Ribocco was the 5-2 favorite in a field of 23 over The Curragh track's 1 1/4-mile turf course. Second-placed Sucaryl was 8 to 1 and English-owned Dartboard was 9 to 1.

Royal Sword, owned by R. K. Mellon of Pittsburgh, fell after five furlongs with a broken leg and had to be destroyed.

Irish jockey Michael Kennedy suffered a broken nose in the fall.

Ribocco, a bay colt by Ribot out of Libra, was ridden by British champion Lester Piggott, who rode a brilliant race.

It looked like Sucaryl as the horses raced to the line but Piggott sent Ribocco storming through on the outside.

Skamander set the early pace followed by Palmas, Sucaryl, Sovereign Slipper, Dan Kano and Gay Garland.

Dartboard led after seven furlongs with Skamander second and Kiss of Life third.

Sucaryl seemed well placed as the thoroughbreds entered the stretch, three furlongs from the end, but was beaten by the fast-finishing Ribocco.

Irish sweepstakes tickets are sold in more than 100 countries and fortunes hang on the result. About a dozen first prizes of $150,000 are handed out to the lucky holders of tickets on the winner.

MARY COUTTS SELECTED FOR PAN-AM HOOP CLUB

MARY COUTTS

VANCOUVER — Mary Coutts of Victoria was one of 14 members named Sunday for Canada's Pan-American Games women's basketball team.

Coach Ruth Wilson said the players will continue training at the University of British Columbia and will leave for Winnipeg on July 16.

Also selected for the team were:

Darlene Currie of Calgary, Marg Curry of Regina, Diane Doyle of Vancouver, Paulene Gensick of Nakusp, Judy Hilliard of Richmond, Dale Kingswood of Port Arthur, Mary MacDonald of Toronto, Cheryl Macintosh of Vancouver, Pat Plisnook of Winnipeg, Barbara Robertson of Ocean Falls, and Janice Robinson of Vancouver.

HENLEY REGATTA

Display of Power By East Germans

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (CP) — East German crews captured four events inside 40 minutes in a massive display of skilled rowing Saturday on the final day of the Royal Henley Regatta.

Their trophies included the Grand Challenge Cup, top prize of the annual classic, which was won by a powerful eight from Leipzig.

The Leipzig crew covered the one-mile, 550-yard River Thames course in six minutes, 46 seconds — fastest time of the four-day meet — to beat England's Tideway Scullers School by 2 1/2 lengths.

The other East German victories:

- Prince Philip Cup for coxed fours: A. S. K. Vovvarts of Rostock beat Tideway Scullers by two lengths in 7:39.
- Silver Goblets for paired oars: S. C. Einbeht of Dresden beat England's Sons of the Thames in 8:18.

Stewards' Challenge Cup for coxed fours: S. Y. Dynamo of Potsdam beat Nereus of Amsterdam, The Netherlands, by two lengths in 7:31.

LOSE TO SWISS

The East Germans lost a fifth final to a Swiss crew. Martin Stuech and Melchior Burgin of the Prasschopper Club, Zurich, won the double sculls event by 1 1/4 lengths over a pair from Potsdam. The time was 7:40.

Later, Stuech thrashed Jochen Meissner of West Germany's Mannheim Club by four lengths in 8:12 to win the diamond single sculls event.

Cornell University captured the Thames Challenge Cup for the United States. The Cornell lightweight crushed England's Nottingham and Union Rowing Club, winning by 2 1/2 lengths in 7:06.

Eton College of England won the Princess Elizabeth Cup for schoolboy eights by two-thirds of a length over Tabor Academy of Marion, Mass. The time was 7:03.

Seeded Stars Crushed In Wimbledon Tourney

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) — The All-England tennis championships, still drawing the crowds in near-record numbers, went into their final stretch today, with the men's bracket cracked wide open.

The first-week massacre of seeded stars was unprecedented since the rankings system was started back in the 1920s.

Six seeds in the men's singles and four in the women's singles were knocked out in the first week, which started with a dramatic first-round defeat of defending champion Manuel Santana of Spain and culminated in the equally dramatic defeats Saturday of the No. 2 seeds in both men's and women's divisions — Australia's Roy Emerson and Brazil's Maria Bueno.

Three Canadians still are involved in doubles competition. Faye Urban of Windsor, Ont., and Vicki Berner of Vancouver had little trouble Saturday in their second-round match against Americans Stephanie DeFina and Tory Ann Fretz, eliminating them in straight sets 7-5, 6-3.

They meet Australians Leanne O'Neill and Helen Gourlay in the third round.

Miss Urban also is in the third round of the mixed doubles, along with Bob Puddicombe of Vancouver. They defeated a South African pair 6-3, 7-5 Friday.

Confederation Day 'One to Remember'

HIGH-STEPPING soldiers of the Queen's Own Rifles thrilled the crowd in front of the City Hall Saturday as they did the traditional "double pass" march past after proclamation was read permitting battalion to march through the city under arms. Pride and pleasure expressed by the crowd who saw the smart manoeuvre, seemed to typify the spirit of the day.—(Photos by William Johns)

Fine Holiday Weather Thinned Crowds But Made Celebrations Program Swing

By TED GASKELL

The weather came close to stealing the show at Victoria's July 1 celebrations.

Everywhere in Victoria the word was "it's a lovely day for it."

But not everybody came. Many people took advantage of the three consecutive days of holidays to head out of town and the crowds looked thinner than on other festive occasions.

But it was a happy time. The military lit the birthday candles with the parade of 100 men from each service and an RCMP unit to the legislative lawns where a hand-embroidered flag was presented to Premier Bennett by Admiral Charles.

"This will probably be the last time we see a parade of this sort with khaki, navy blue and light blue," said one naval officer a little sadly. The march past with Lieutenant Governor Pearkes taking the salute ended the ceremony. Then the crowd moved across the lawns of the legislative buildings for the opening of the Confederation Garden Court.

The military were in evidence elsewhere too. At the lookoff in Beacon Hill Park, four guns of the Fifth B.C. Regiment fired a 100-gun salute and the noise was only rivalled by three Voodos from Comox which roared over the legislative buildings.

The battalion paraded at city hall for permission to march through the city "under arms and with bugles blowing." Mayor Hugh Stephen agreed after the march was halted by Constable Laurie Belfry of the city police, according to tradition.

There was a good crowd on the sidewalks to hear the proclamation read and to see Col. H. C. Pitts present the regimental crest to his worship.

Highlight of the ceremony came when the battalion, taking its orders from drum beats, made the march past at the double then slowed to the light infantry pace of "180 to the minute" for the march to the buildings.

More ceremony here, as the feu de joie was fired. Reports rippled up and down the ranks like a two-second machine gun burst and hats were doffed and cheers rang out.

There was an exodus to Beacon Hill Park where the Oak Bay band played a concert, to a small crowd which ignored the park seats while seeking shade on the grass.

The life of the party was Centennial Square where people gathered to hear the Battle of the Bands, watch the square dancing and baton twirlers.

Some just used the lawns to lounge in the sun.

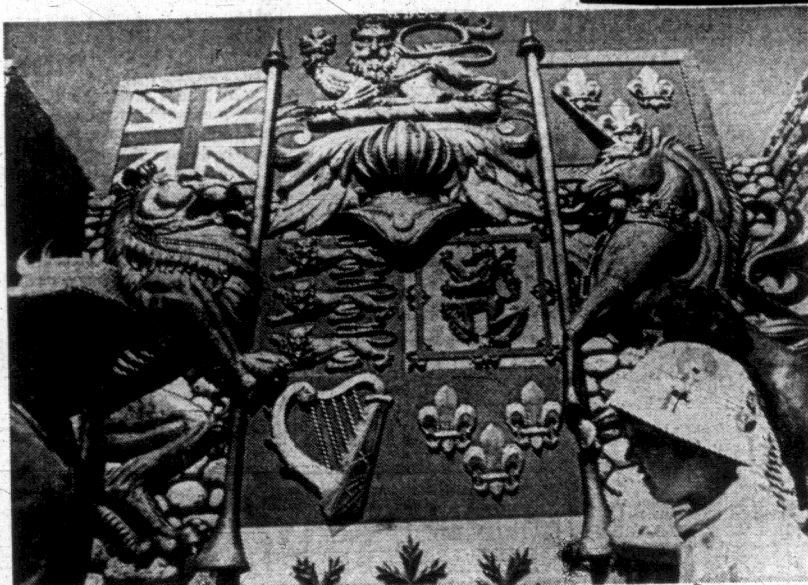

But there were people everywhere. Old, young, toddlers teenagers. It seemed as if every one in Victoria was in Centennial Square.

The Centennial singers gave a concert and the day ended on a purely local note with tenor David Galbraith ending his brief program with Ken Garland's song "Follow the Birds."

It was a good party, a very happy birthday. And the memory will last a long time.

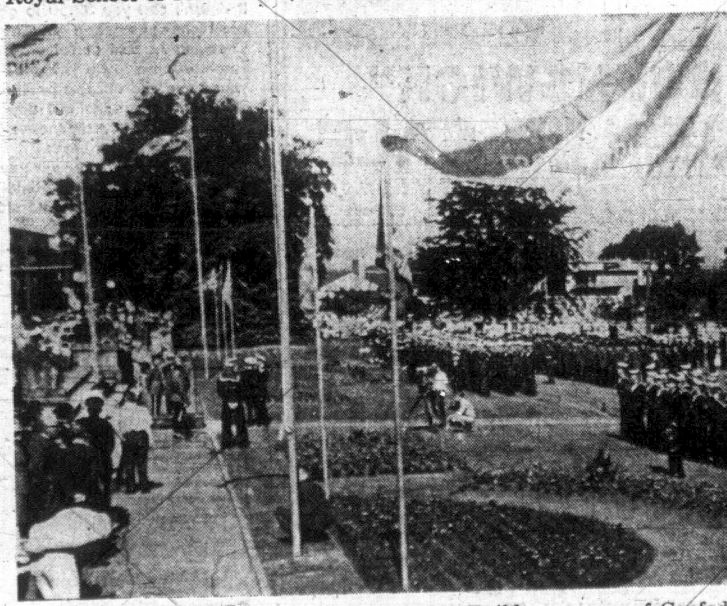

SPECTATORS FOUND hand-embroidered flag of British Columbia irresistible as it stood before legislative buildings Saturday after presentation to Premier Bennett. The silk flag was made at the Royal School of Needlework, Kensington, and was presented to province by members of the army, navy, air force and RCMP. So many people handled the flag to feel the texture that it was eventually taken down.

TRAILING SMOKE, three RCAF Voodoo jets from Comox roared over the legislative buildings Saturday morning as other military units parade below to mark Canada's 100th birthday.

SOFT GREEN LAWNS of the Legislative Buildings cushioned the stamp of military boots as men of the army, navy and air force, plus the militia and naval reserve paraded to mark the 100th anniversary of Confederation. The units, each 100 strong, formed up in the middle of the hollow square formed by spectators who stood on the three sides of the lawn and before the main entrance to the buildings.

Highlight of the morning parade, which included a fly-past and a march past, came when a hand-embroidered silk flag was presented to the province from men of the three fighting services and RCMP.

ETERNAL FLAME was lit by Premier Bennett Saturday at the official opening of the Confederation Garden Court at Menzies and Belleville. The flame, which flared out and distorted the camera's view of spectators beyond, continued to burn brightly as water jets from fountain shot upwards. The torch stands before the huge bronze Canadian coat of arms, left, which provides colorful centrepiece for the new square.

Garden of Canada Will Always Recall Centennial Holiday

When the echoes of the 11-gun salute have died; when happy Centennial Square memories are fading, Victoria's Confederation Garden Court will recall Canada's 100th birthday.

The Garden was officially opened Saturday by Lieutenant Governor Pearkes who unveiled the commemorative bronze plaque.

And Premier Bennett lit the eternal flame. Before the official opening hundreds mounted the broad steps to sit by the cool waters of the fountain, to walk on the natural rocky slopes with their evergreens and colorful flowers. Many showed interest in the massive stonework bearing the bronze and enameled provincial coats of arms with Canada's arms towering above.

Workmen had rushed to finish the work, carried out as a project of the Capital Region Improvement Commission. Most work was completed but there were a few patches of lawn to be seeded and flowers still to be planted.

But nobody seemed to mind. Premier Bennett referred to the garden as a "magnificent operation."

Premier Bennett said the opening of the garden was "indicative of the feeling of living history so abroad in the land on this the 100th birthday of Canadian Confederation."

He said the garden which "pays tribute to Canada as a nation" also commemorates a milestone in the long and successful road of the Capital Improvement District.

"In the belief that this province and this nation will long endure it is my privilege to bring to life this eternal flame. May it burn through the years to remind our citizens of their past history and the unbounded opportunities for the future."

As the premier put the torch to the flame it flared and then the jets from the fountain shot upwards and the same time water cascaded down over the smooth stones of the centre section of the backdrop wall.

BIGGEST CELEBRATION SINCE THE END OF THE WAR

Birthday Bash Dizzies Capital

OTTAWA (CP)—The national capital emerged slightly dizzy today from the most tumultuous and general celebrations here since the end of the Second World War.

An abundance of patriotic spirit and an absence of rowdiness marked the Saturday celebration of the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

A crowd of 50,000 was on Parliament Hill at midnight Friday to welcome the second century.

Children lighted sparklers, men cracked bottles of champagne and drivers caught in an hour-long traffic jam blew their horns and shouted "happy birthday."

An estimated 60,000—mostly youngsters—turned up for a birthday party Saturday afternoon at which Queen Elizabeth cut the cake.

A few minutes later, she and Prince Philip were welcomed by 22,000 teen-agers at a royal huddle in Lansdowne Park.

At midnight Saturday, another crowd estimated at 50,000, was at Parliament Hill for a deafening fireworks display also watched by the Queen.

Only a 2 a.m. thunderstorm dissipated the singing, cheering, good-natured throngs.

The royal couple left for Cornwall Sunday to board their yacht Britannia for a visit to Expo 67 today.

They will spend Tuesday aboard the yacht at Kingston, Ont., then fly back to London from Ottawa Wednesday.

The week-long visit to Canada is the fourth the Queen has made since she was crowned in 1953 and, though only half over, it appeared by Sunday to be the most successful.

Amazed police found solid, middle-aged citizens interceding on behalf of long-haired youths who romped illegally through city fountains.

Conga lines snaked through Confederation Square until near dawn Saturday.

Drivers sat good-naturedly through traffic tieups that took up to an hour to sort out.

Trumpeter Bobby Gimby, composer of the Centennial song, Ca-na-da, and a choir of school children serenaded the Queen as she left Rideau Gate Saturday morning for Parliament Hill and the only really formal ceremony of the weekend.

The Queen, in tiara, gown and blue sash, replied to addresses of loyalty by the Speakers of the Senate and the Commons in the outdoor Parliament Hill affair.

The Ottawa round ended Sunday with morning service at Christ Church Anglican Cathedral, hit by a storm-caused power failure moments after the royal couple arrived.

The hour-long service went on without lights and organ music. Most Rev. R. H. Clark, Anglican Primate of Canada, opened his sermon by joking that such events serve to "remind us that we are mortal."

FOLK ARTS PAGEANT on Parliament Hill Friday was attended by the Queen, Prince Philip, Prime Minister Pearson and State

Secretary Judy LaMarsh, shown here on their arrival. Event was jammed into tight-packed schedule of Queen's Centennial visit.

FIREWORKS on Parliament Hill lit up the Peace Tower Friday night as 50,000 persons gathered to celebrate Canada's 100th birthday. Police said it was the largest crowd to gather in one spot in Ottawa's history.

Government House reception Friday night. Aides stand behind the receiving line at reception for editors, reporters and photographers.

FORMALITY FORGOTTEN

Queen, Philip Wow the Press

OTTAWA (CP)—The Queen and Prince Philip, relaxed and confident, swept Ottawa's press corps off its feet at an informal reception in a crowded ballroom at Government House.

About 200 editors, reporters and photographers were presented to the royal visitors in a stiffly formal receiving line.

Then Elizabeth and Philip moved into the "tent room" to mingle with the throng. Separating, they shifted with ease from one group to another.

NURSED SINGLE DRINK

The Queen nursed a single gin and tonic through the one-hour affair; Philip a scotch and water.

Philip spent five minutes with Mrs. John Bird, an Ottawa radio journalist who is chairman of the newly-appointed royal commission on the status of women.

They traded light-hearted banter about the struggle by women to achieve equality with men, to the great delight of correspondents within ear range.

Philip cracked that one of the big problems in this regard was that men and women were created different.

'GOES DOWN THE DRAIN'

He said that once a woman with a PhD is put behind a kitchen sink "she goes down the drain"—it was hard for her to pull herself back into a professional life.

Philip suggested that the solution for these women may be to accept the likelihood that their careers will in future be interrupted by marriage and children.

When Philip ventured that the report of the commission headed by Mrs. Bird—who is Anne Francis in professional life—might meet the same fate as many reports of this kind by gathering dust on some shelf, she replied emphatically: "Not this one."

The weather—it was raining outside during the reception—was a favorite conversation piece. To one group, Philip said the average weather is always forecast "but we never seem to get it."

He said he had noticed on the trip in from the airport that Ottawa's construction program was being tidied up.

NO DETOUR THIS TIME

"I think it's the first time I've been here that we haven't had to take a detour."

Prince Philip also commented that since he had arrived he had been hearing about nothing but the centennial on radio and TV. A reporter said the celebration had been so well-promoted that even the smallest town had a centennial project. "Oh, so they've all been really brainwashed then," he said jokingly.

The Queen spoke to a reporter for the CBC French language network who announced that he was "not a separatist."

She said soberly that the separatist movement had been getting a lot of publicity in France, and that there seemed to have been new developments since the last time she visited Canada.

The reporter said that if a small group of people made enough noise they would get a lot of publicity, and the Queen murmured she supposed so.

Charles Lynch, chief of Southam News Services, recalled to Philip the Prince's remarks of a few years ago about Ontario's archaic liquor laws.

As Philip nodded in amusement, someone else referred to the changes made since.

"Anything else you'd like me to fix up?" Philip asked.

"Sure, how about opening the press club bar earlier," a photographer chimed in.

"Sorry, I never mix in those parochial affairs," the Prince said, to laughter.

As the Queen moved to leave the ballroom there was a spontaneous burst of applause, rarely heard from a press group.

MOVING CAREFULLY, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip climb the steps around the National War Memorial as they prepare to place a wreath during ceremonies. Thousands watched royal couple at ceremony.

RADIANT QUEEN is shown greeting Transport Minister Jack Pickers-gill at a state dinner at Government House Friday night. She was wearing an emerald and diamond tiara with matching necklace and the blue sash of Order of the Garter. Event was social highlight of weekend.

REVELLERS capped the big Centennial splash in Ottawa Friday with their own small, one-in front of the fountain around the Centennial flame in front of the Parliament Buildings. The happy birthday dip was enjoyed by the last of the crowd who turned up on Parliament Hill. (CP Wirephotos.)

HONORED BY DINNER Friday were Paul and Alice Piroson (left), caretakers of the Vimy Ridge Memorial for 43 years. The French couple, who stayed with the memorial throughout the Second World War, are travelling across Canada as Centennial year guests of the Canadian government. The Pirosons have been unofficial hosts to thousands of visiting Canadian veterans. Presiding at the dinner, arranged by the South Vancouver Island Zone Council of the Royal Canadian Legion at the Red Lion Motor Inn, were zone commander Lawrence Fieldhouse (right) and Mrs. Fieldhouse.

Plan Next Spring's Bulbs By Ordering Supplies Now

By HILDA BEASTALL
Gardeners need to plan now for bulb display in the first spring of Canada's second century.

Spring 1968 may seem a long way off in July, but bulb orders for planting this coming fall should be in the hands of growers during summer.

Some varieties, particularly daffodils and others of the narcissi are not dug each year by local growers if they are new and in the higher price range.

If orders are received for these varieties the required number of bulbs are dug, the orders remain in the ground.

One great advantage of having an order in locally is that you have the bulbs early in September for planting.

The weather then is nearly always pleasant, warm without being hot, with rain in the books for the month end.

Early planting of winter crocuses, winter irises and all the narcissi means that root-commencement early and the bulbs are well started underground before the soil becomes cold.

Tulips, muscari and Dutch irises can well be held back for October planting when soil temperatures are lower, since these tend to start top growth too soon for their own good if they have early root action.

With these ideas in mind, the narcissi bulbs might more conveniently be planted in groups between shrubs where spaces are vacant for them in September, and the tulips confined to beds which are filled in summer by annuals.

CENTENNIAL CAKE TURNS ALL GOOEY

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's huge Centennial birthday cake, unveiled Saturday, looked more like a chocolate sundae a day later.

The four-tier cake, 24 feet high, is made of plywood but faced with real icing.

Rain early Sunday caused the icing to run, leaving big patches of brown plywood to public view. From a distance, the mixture of white and brown had the look of chocolate sauce spread over a vast sea of vanilla ice cream.

LETHAL THRUST of a steel pole in car crash Sunday missed driver, who had been tossed to one side. Kenneth Mindenhall escaped with just cuts and bruises after his car went out of control and mangled 40 feet of chain link fence. Pole from the fence punched through windshield and centre of steering wheel to tear gaping hole where driver normally is.—(William John photo)

Car Pierced by Pole; Driver's Hurts Minor

A steel pole was driven through a car Sunday, missing the driver by a split second. Leading Seaman Kenneth Mindenhall, 22, of 560 Hillside, suffered only minor injuries. He is in Canadian Forces Base Hospital.

His car went out of control on a sharp curve at Craigflower and Styles, near Banfield Park in Victoria West, skidded sideways over a curb and mangled 40 feet of chain link fencing. One of the poles in the fence knifed through the car's windshield, passed through the steering wheel and punched a hole deep into the back of the driver's seat.

But Mindenhall had been tossed to one side in the crash. Police describe damage as heavy.

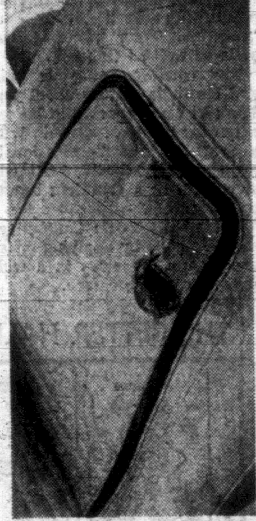

OTHER ACCIDENTS
In other weekend crashes, Mrs. Doreen Campbell, 46, of 3409 Shebourne, is in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital after a two-car accident on the Trans-Canada Highway near Belgrave shortly before midnight Sunday.

She suffered head and rib injuries when her car was struck from behind by another auto and veered off the road into a rock outcrop.

Damage was estimated at $3,500.

Saanich police said both Mrs. Campbell and car that of Robert James Russell, 27, of 2805 Forbes, were eastbound at the time of the accident.

Four-year-old Stephen Hunt of 2627 Blanshard was treated for head and leg injuries and later released from Royal Jubilee

Hospital when struck by a car Friday afternoon.

Police said the little boy was crossing Blanshard near his house. Driver of the car involved was identified as Ronald Sweet of 721 Chesterline. He was headed north on Blanshard.

A two-car crash at the Trans-Canada Highway and Burnside Sunday evening sent a woman passenger to hospital and caused an estimated $700 damage.

Mrs. John Concom of 4070 Broadfoot suffered cuts and bruises and is reported in good condition.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, who received a badly bruised hand when his auto was in collision with a car driven by Robert Schmidt, 232 Superior.

Doctors Quit Autopsy Work Until Ordered

Nanaimo Man Found Drowned

A young Nanaimo fisherman, Terry Mearnes, 23, was found drowned off the west coast of Orcas Island Sunday, three days after picking up a new fishing boat in Vancouver.

The boat with the deck awash was found nearby.

The body was discovered by the United States Coast Guard.

Mr. Mearnes had picked up the boat from a Vancouver shipyard Wednesday and had not been heard from since.

Orcas Island is 24 miles north-east of Victoria.

Doctors are borrowing the trade union "work to rule" device in a fight for higher pay for coroners' postmortems.

British Columbia Medical Association has sent letters to all British Columbia physicians, asking them to join in a fee protest.

The strategy calls for all doctors to refuse to provide professional services for a coroner unless formally ordered to do so under authority of the Coroner's Act.

The letter says the present fees payable for post mortems have been unchanged since 1923. The Attorney-General's department has assured the BCMA that it was recognized the fees are inadequate.

(The act sets a fee of $25 per autopsy.)

ADVISED A-G.

The CMA said it advised the A-G's department May 15 that after July 1 pathologists would be unwilling to continue holding autopsies, at less than BCMA fee levels. (These were not specified.)

However, the letter states: "The Coroner's Act is extraordinary in that it is the only act known to us whereby a professional man can be ordered, under penalty, to perform a professional service."

A doctor may refuse if he has "a reasonable excuse."

The letter adds, "Doctors should make it clear to their respective coroners that they will no longer perform services under the Coroner's Act unless under specific coroner's order."

'AS BEST HE CAN'

"If such order is made, coroners will be advised that a doctor will obey as best he can and fulfil his legal duty, even though he considers the whole process unjust and antiquated."

The letter also points out that any doctor may be ordered to do this work although many may not have done so for many years.

"Doctors in receipt of a coroner's order should make it clear in their subsequent report precisely what their qualifications are for performing the work they are made to do."

Youth Guilty of 'Mischief'

A youth who caused an estimated $200 damage after entering an Esquimalt house appeared in central court Friday.

Gerald McDonald, 1421 Harrison, pleaded guilty and will be sentenced July 11 for causing mischief.

Court was told he smashed the glass and a door panel at 519 Craigflower June 15 and threw kitchen utensils around before police arrived.

Upper Floor Lost In Fire At Oak Bay

Fire destroyed the roof and the upper interior of an Oak Bay home, Sunday.

Firemen were called to the home of W. G. Lynch at 1972 St. Ann about 11:30 a.m. Fire broke out after some papers had been burned in a downstairs fireplace. The fire spread up the wall, into attic space and down another wall.

One water pipe burst due to the fire, and wiring was destroyed.

Mr. Lynch said that three upstairs rooms will have to be rebuilt and work is required on downstairs walls and ceilings where water damage occurred. The roof, open to the sky, must be replaced.

Cost of repairs have not been estimated.

Man Felled By Smoke From Bedding

An elderly man whose mattress caught fire Friday afternoon as he smoked in bed is reported in fair condition at Veterans' Hospital today.

John Myers, 69, a tenant at 159 South Turner, managed to stagger from the house but then collapsed when overcome by smoke.

A fireman was also injured and a dog locked in a porch was rescued by police. The blaze caused an estimated $4,000 damage.

Fireman Ernie Byrrell suffered a cut hand when he broke a window. He was stitched up at St. Joseph's Hospital and later released.

City police said an explosion which touched off a fire in a shack on Comnaught around noon Saturday was caused by a can of gunpowder blowing up.

DAMAGE LIGHT

Owner of the building in the 700-block, Max Lohrman, master of the foundry whaler Green in the inner harbour, told officers he knew nothing of the gunpowder. Damage was reported as light.

A chestfield fire in a house at 643 John St. shortly before 4 a.m. Saturday set off a treasure hunt for some missing money.

Wilfred Philibert told officers $250 that had been in his wallet was missing. The hunt turned up a bundle of charred bills. Mr. Philibert was advised to take them to a bank for exchange.

Damage from the fire was light.

Local Students Win $1,200 Federal Awards

Two young wildlife biologists from Victoria area have been awarded $1,200 Canadian Wildlife Service scholarships by the federal government.

Stanley W. Speller, 24, a graduate of the University of Victoria, now completing an M.Sc. degree at Carleton University, will enter a Ph. D. program at University of Saskatchewan. His thesis will be on the denning behavior of the arctic fox.

Frederick J. Tarasoff, 22, of Cobble Hill, will complete his M.Sc. at UBC. He is studying the basis relationship between seals and certain related terrestrial mammals.

The purpose of the scholarship program, which allows biologists to continue graduate studies, is to attract trained biologists into the wildlife field.

Playful Wind Tangles Spinnakers As 300 Yachts Fight for Position

By TERRY IZZARD

A light wind proved an ill wind for several of the 300 yachts taking part in the Pacific International Yachting Association regatta here at the weekend.

Two boats ended up on the rocks off Gordon Head while others tried madly to untangle their spinnakers.

Yet another, the Diamond Head, biggest boat in the race, became so frustrated with the situation that skipper Henry Kotkin, of Seattle, took off without ever finishing.

CLEAR SKIES

Otherwise, the race lived up to its name as the biggest, most colorful sailing spectacle of the Pacific Northwest.

More than 300 boats are registered for the four-day event.

With a light northwesterly blowing, it wasn't long before spinnakers began blossoming in the crowded field.

As the smaller classes darted between the bigger boats, a number of spinnaker sheets became tangled, adding to the confusion of an already tightly-knit field.

One yacht which didn't have to worry about crowding was the Mary Bower owned by John Long of Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

A veteran of many PIYA and Swiftsure races, she skipped into the lead at the starter's gun and held the spot over the entire 15-mile course for first boat over the line and first on corrected time in the A class.

First Victoria boat over the line was Jack Smith in his converted 8-metre yacht, Reality.

In the shorter 12 1/4-mile race for Thunderbirds, Ned Ashe of Victoria gave T. Pape of Corinthian Yacht Club of Seattle a run for his money.

In a close finish, Mr. Pape, in Kiwa, got a slight edge over Mr. Ashe's May D II, to grab first place on corrected time.

Taking fourth place was another Victoria boat, Hussy, owned by Dave Anstey.

SUNDAY UNLUCKY

Sunday's races provided most mishaps.

First to get into trouble was Maradea owned by W. Burgess of Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

His 36-foot craft ran on to a rock off Gordon Head Point.

The crew managed to rock and push its way clear and damage was slight.

Second to go was Picnic owned by Gordie Inglis of Victoria.

He also went aground on a submerged rock and his boat was out of the race today being inspected on the ways.

Further marring Sunday's racing were several protests.

One of the protests was lodged as result of an incident at the starting line off Gordon Head.

The other three resulted from incidents at turning points along the six-mile triangular course.

Officials were considering the protests this morning and results of Sunday's races were still not known at press time.

While the larger boats participated in Wind Pennant series races and Large Boat Triangle races, the smaller craft flittered around Cadboro Bay.

ENDS TUESDAY

Races end Tuesday evening when overall winners will be announced at Royal Victoria Yacht Club, this year's host club.

The Party's Over But the Holiday Lingers on

They didn't roll up the sidewalks in Victoria this morning. But they may as well have.

A few tourists aimlessly wandered the streets looking for a store from which to buy souvenirs — or a coffee shop for breakfast.

A long search may reveal the latter although most of the city lay as quiet as Ross Bay cemetery on a Sunday morning.

Some restaurants were open, but at 10 o'clock this morning most had closed doors.

The only general stores open were corner stores dispensing the basic staples.

B.C. Hydro buses, running a regular weekday schedule, were carrying at the most two or three passengers.

Bastion Square was deserted.

Centennial Square was hosting four obvious camera-dangling tourists. And it was early for the hippies.

City hall, the legislative buildings and the post office were closed.

So were the major department stores which waited in vain Friday for an announcement from Attorney General Robert Bonner telling them that they could open today without fear of prosecution.

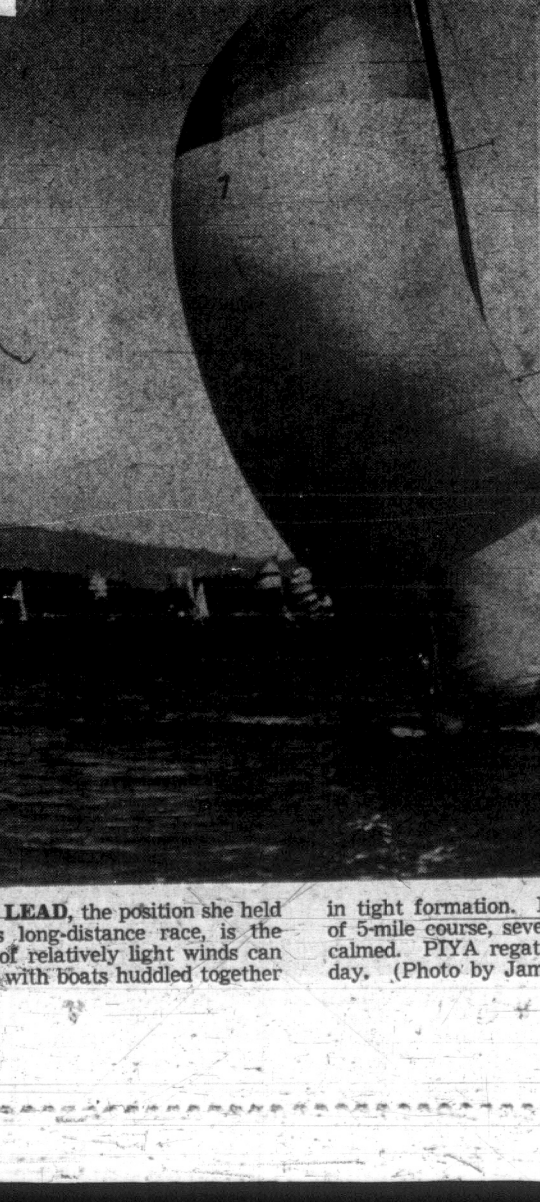

The announcement eventually came, but too late for stores which prepare advertising a minimum of two days ahead of a selling season.

Mr. Bonner's announcement, late Friday afternoon, stated that local governments could determine their own policy on whether retailers should open or close.

If it was far too late for the stores it was also too late for most civic governments to make a decision or an announcement.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said he felt the responsibility very definitely belonged to the provincial government but added that Victoria council would not prosecute anyone who opened for business today.

Having to delay that decision until Mr. Bonner, visiting his constituents in the Cariboo, had given a provincial ruling, Mayor Stephen's assurance was also too late to widely effect the deadline decision of major retailers.

FORGING INTO THE LEAD, the position she held throughout Saturday's long-distance race, is the Mary Bower. Result of relatively light winds can be seen in background with boats huddled together in tight formation. By the time they neared end of 5-mile course, several yachts were virtually becalmed. SHOPPING GUIDE

Wee Scots Charmers
Are Great Gift Buy

By Penny Saver

Visitors are once again following the birds to Victoria, and the Saver family, after doing a two-year promotion job for the city while on holiday, has been playing host for the past few days to a couple of southern visitors. They've quite enjoyed the local flora and fauna (hippies?) in Beacon Hill Park. But in spite of all the local color, they've been most impressed with the tremendous variety of British imports available in the shops. The seven and eight per cent exchange given on American money, plus the fantastic variety of imports makes our city a bargain-hunter's paradise.

One of our guests, who can trace her family tree back to a purely Scottish ancestry, spent hours browsing in a little shop that specializes in imports from Scotland. Her first "loves" in this shop were James and Jock, two little Scotsmen. These are hand-made dolls with exquisitely hand-painted faces, dressed in kilts, with James carrying a drum, and his friend playing a good old highland fling on the bagpipes. The tartans they wear are authentic miniatures. Their companion is a little girl dancing a fling with toes well-pointed. Each of these beautiful dolls is priced at $3.50. Perfect collector's items, they are always appreciated gifts.

A big hit with the better half with a little Scots blood in his veins is a truly Scottish tie. This one tie is practically a wardrobe in itself—it is four ties in one. In the first place it is reversible, plaid on one side and neutral on the other... but that's not all. The two halves of the tie are different plaids, backed with two different neutral tones. This marvellous neck-piece is guaranteed not to crease or slide, and it is made of pure wool. Priced at $2.50, this "thrifty" tie is not only practical, but a great novelty gift.

For the ladies, there are beautifully-fashioned feather brooches, all hand-made in Scotland. These are made of real feathers so they will never fade, lose their shape or get ragged in the rain. Designed to simulate the actual coloring of the birds they represent, the flying pheasant, the partridge, blue jay, or grouse, are smart and unique accessories for a suit or coat lapel. These are priced at $2.75 each.

If you'd like to know where I did my thrifty Scottish shopping, please give me a call at 382-3131, and I'll be happy to tell you.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

When I was very young I thought that life was over. When it had just begun. Perish the thought, not for me!

Just for those age forty-three, (or less)

When I was 15, I thought I was much older than I was, and now I feel much younger than I am. I am the least age-conscious person imaginable, but when I have been touched by it slightly, as you can see, it has been in a very happy way. Hope the same is true of you!

However, I know that this is not true of many women because of the letters I receive from readers, what they have told me in personal interviews, and because of listening to the conversations of women in many different circumstances and on many different occasions. Lots of them literally think themselves into premature aging.

I believe that the image we have of ourselves has a terrific influence on what we become. It affects our glands as well as our approach to life. The two of them can narrow the horizons of personal life and experience, take the fun out of living, and lead to premature aging, or can widen our viewpoint and multiply our interests and happiness, and prolong the youthful portion of life.

Do not allow yourself to be age-classified. Invest in whatever interests and do whatever you are able to do at any age, not just what you are supposed to be interested in or do because of group thinking. I consider age-consciousness to be a disease, and one which is extremely damaging to health, happiness and good looks. Yet, many women begin investing in it at an early age. At 25, they dread 30. At 35 they dread 40. At 45 they dread 50, and so forth. How boring can you make life?

Of course, today this is just plain old-fashioned for anyone who is well-informed. It is a well-established fact that a person's real age depends on physical condition and on outlook, not on birthdays.

I hope that you, as I, have many friends who are not just your age, but some much older and some much younger. If so, it is because of mutual understanding and rapport rather than birthdays. If you would like to have my leaflet "Individual Happiness" which gives you psychological help if you are in the "dumps," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request. Address to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Clubwomen's News

Guest Speaker—"Korea, Past and Present" was the topic of G. F. Parkyn when he spoke at the recent buffet dinner and meeting of the Soroptimist Club of Greater Victoria in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Mr. Parkyn and his wife became familiar with the country when they adopted a little Korean orphan girl, Won Auk. Following Mr. Parkyn's speech, Mrs. Parkyn showed articles which had been sent to them from their foster child, Mrs. Lois Avery, charter member of the Timmins, Ont. Soroptimists, conducted the installation of new officers which followed. Guests at the meeting included president Mrs. Melba Schappert and four members of the Duncan Club; president Mrs. Bert Wallace and four members of the Brenton, Wash., Club; Mrs. Janie Lowe, Leavenworth, Kan.; Mrs. Ronald Lowe, Shawnee Mission, Kan.; Alderman Lily Wilson and Mrs. Con Watling, Victoria.

For travelling on honeymoon, the new Mrs. Butler chose a turquoise dress and coat ensemble with hat in tone. Beige and brown accessories and a yellow orchid completed the outfit.

A New You by Emily Wilkens

Don't wait until you "come out" as a bathing beauty to discover that the image of your well-carved figure is distorted by feet that can't face the light of day.

Obviously, you're in the spotlight from head to toe when you're beach bound. To prepare for your place in the sun, start now to make your weekly pedicure more than a hit-or-miss affair.

The same sensible nail care rules for fingernails apply to toenails. The major complaints are constant dryness and splitting, frequently due to nails being covered for weeks by old coats of polish. Never, ever keep your toenail polish or even base coat on longer than two to three weeks.

To correct dryness, try a nightly oiling with baby oil. This takes only a few seconds and keeps the cuticle pliable. It also discourages hard corny growths.

To start your professional pedicure properly, line up your implements. These should be distinct from the ones you use for your fingernails, since feet can carry mild bacteria which you may readily transfer to your hands.

The necessary tools are: A supply of fresh emery boards, a good pair of nail clippers, a hoofstick or orangewood stick, cotton, baby oil or nail cream, a pumice stone and, perhaps, pumice in stick form (available in drug stores), a basin large enough for your feet, a few towels—and voila!—you're ready!

1. Remove all polish.
2. File or trim the toenails straight across. If they're too long, use the clippers initially, then follow up with an emery board to smooth out the rough edges. Be sure to leave the corners quite straight, since rounding them encourages ingrown toenails, a painful condition.

3. Soak your feet in warm, soapy water for a few minutes, then use a pumice stone to smooth away calluses.
4. Dry feet and massage nails with nail cream or baby oil.

5. Gently work a dampened cotton-wrapped orangewood stick all around the cuticle to clean the nails. This removes soap, cream and other matter which tends to accumulate.
6. Use a cuticle scissor to remove hangnails.

7. Plunge your feet back into the soapy water and scrub thoroughly with a nail brush.
8. After drying your feet, use the fine side of an emery board to make sure that no rough spots remain which may snag hose, cream and other matter which tends to accumulate.

9. Prepare nails for polish by separating toes with strips of tissue.

10. Apply a base, then one or two coats of polish.

If you plan on matching fingernails and toenails, fine just don't mix two different bright colors together.

A natural shade goes well with any tone of fingernail polish. Pearlized types are "must-nots" for problem toenails as well as fingernails.

The condition of your nails and feet tells a story about you. The girl who cares about herself cares for her toes, as well. With a sparkling and "professional" step forth as a confident beauty on the beach.

JUST FOR YOU: Camouflage too-wide nails by applying polish away from the sides in a wide streak down the centre.

DEAR ABBY

Mother Has Sweet
Tooth for Booze

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter will be christened in our church soon, and it is customary to have guests at home afterward for food and drinks.

The problem is my mother-in-law. She has a drinking problem. No matter what the occasion, if there is liquor around, she uses it as an excuse to get very, very drunk.

For that reason, the last christening we had, I served no alcoholic beverages, and several of my husband's relatives remarked that they felt "cheated." What should I do this time? I don't want anyone to feel "cheated" in my home, but I can't bear seeing my mother-in-law in that condition.

Don't say, "Watch her." She just helps herself and it would take physical force to stop her. RUZZLED HOSTESS.

DEAR ABBY: Give a "dry party." It would be easier than giving a wet one and worrying about your mother-in-law. It's a kindness to keep temptation out of her way. And as for your husband's relatives, they can surely forego their drinks following a religious ceremony in which a child has been officially named and identified with a church.

DEAR ABBY: I am a nice looking girl (so I've been told), and recently my boy friend bought me a "fall" (wig). When I wear it, it seems to attract a lot of attention. Here is my complaint.

Almost every time I've got my fall on, some jealous girl will say in front of a lot of people, "Is that a wig you have on, or is that your own hair?" This makes me feel real bad, and I never know what to say. I hate to say it's not my own hair because that is why I wear it, so people will think it is. I hate to say it's my own hair because if they ask, they must know it isn't. So what should I say when I'm asked this question?

DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: If you have the courage, say, "If you'll forgive me for not answering, I'll forgive you for asking." Or, "Yes, it's mine. Bought and paid for."

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago my husband and I took a vacation trip with another couple who live out of town. We had a fairly good time, but this other couple said they never had so much fun in all their lives.

The next summer they wrote and asked us what our vacation plans were as they wanted very much to have another foursome-type vacation trip. We really weren't so keen on the idea, but not knowing how to get out of it, we went anyway. We didn't have a good time at all, but they seemed to.

This year we got another letter asking us where we should "all" go for our vacation. We do not want to get roped again, but we don't know how to get out of it without hurting their feelings. We own our own business, so they know we can get away any time we want to. Please help us. Sign this...

JOHN AND MARY.

DEAR JOHN AND MARY: Write to your friends and tell them your vacation plans are indefinite, and to go ahead and make theirs without you. Don't invent any phony excuses or they might "wait" for you. (PS: You should feel gratified that you're such good company.)

With each new television series, Patricia Blair feels 100 years older. It's not the work—it's the era! "The Rifleman" was set in the last century. Her present series, "Daniel Boone," is circa 1775. There are no movies planned for the attractive star: "When you are doing a series, there just isn't any time!"

And One of Them Is 'Daniel Boone'

SHE HAS TWO HUBBIES

By DINA SUDLOW

Not every gal has two husbands—legitimately.

Patricia Blair has. She's Mrs. Martin Colbert, wife of a successful land developer and businessman in Beverly Hills, Calif.

She's also the wife of actor Fess Parker—Rebekah in the television series "Daniel Boone."

"It's terrific having two husbands," she says. "Martin walks on the set and Fess asks him how 'our' wife is today!"

The Colberts were in town on Friday for a provincial government luncheon marking Western Airlines inaugural flight connecting Vancouver and centres in California.

Travel-mates were actor Glenn Ford and his wife, Kathryn Hays.

They returned to town today, this time for a holiday.

And they both deserve one.

During the year, Patricia has about three weeks off from filming. Her day begins at 5 a.m. and she's on the set at 6.

"Martin gets up the same time I do and has breakfast with me. But we are rapidly losing all our friends 'cause when I leave, he goes around knocking on doors at 6 a.m. to find someone to have coffee with him."

When Patricia goes on location or personal appearances, her husband goes along too. "We have a marvellous agreement. When I have to travel, he arranges his schedule to go with me, and when he's on the move, I go too!"

Travelling with Miss Blair can be a sometimes-dampening experience for Mr. Colbert. She remembers with a laugh her personal appearance at this year's Indianapolis 500 race.

"Because I was going to be on a float, Martin was left to his own devices, so a photographer friend took him around the parade route to show him some of the best places to take pictures of me."

"It poured with rain—until my float came out. I was fine—Martin was drenched. He wasn't going to speak to me for a week!"

During the few times they aren't on the move, the Colberts make their home in Beverly Hills. But "home," really, is a 60-foot cruiser, equipped with everything from stereo to a full bathroom.

This is Miss Blair's fourth season as Rebekah. And it's a good thing she likes animals for the series is packed with 'em. "One show had three deer, six raccoons, three mountain lions—oh yes, and one frog."

But her bug-bear is bears. "They are huge! I was once

As well as a series of races, a number of social events has been scheduled. Friday evening, competitors gathered on Sidney Spit for a salmon barbecue, with entertainment by the Homeowners. Saturday evening, the Ambassadors played for dancing at a party in the clubhouse. A colorful Polynesian theme will be used to decorate the clubhouse for an informal dance this evening. Dave Pepper's orchestra will play for dancing. Following prize-giving ceremonies on Tuesday, skippers and crews will gather for a wind-up dance. Dave Pepper's orchestra will again be playing for dancing.

Fete New Bride

Roses on corsage were presented to Mrs. James Thomas Robertson, the former Miss Darlene Carol Wilson, when she was feted with a shower in the Foul Bay Road home of Mrs. F. Hammond. Her mother, Mrs. A. Wilson, and the groom's mother received similar corsages. Guests attending included Mrs. M. Wilson, Mrs. G. Girton, Mrs.

E. Wilson, Mrs. A. Starkey, Mrs. J. Jones, Mrs. B. Raybone, Mrs. G. Thorpe, and the Misses Doreen and Diane Falkner, Nora Robertson, Jeannie Girton, Arlene Pelot and Evelyn Hammond.

Hear Vows

Guests travelling from out-of-town for the recent Butler-Alexander wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Victor Fowler, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Eileen Butler of Kelowna; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Tronnes, Mrs. Rudy Paré, all of Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Richmond of Duncan; Mr. Conner Clarke, Dawson Creek; and Mr. James Muir, Mission.

WORN FOR MACDOUGALL-STEWART VOWS IN ST. AIDAN'S

Delicate Lace Trim Enhances Bridal Gown

A gown of crystal-satin was worn by Linda Arlene Stewart when she became the bride of Ian Arthur Stuart MacDougall in St. Aidan's United Church.

Fashioned with a lace bodice and sleeves ending in lily points, the gown was highlighted by the cathedral train which was trimmed with similar lace appliques. A satin halo trimmed with pearls and roses held the bride's bouffant veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink Briarcliffe roses and stephanotis.

Rev. A. G. MacLeod officiated at the service uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ernest Stewart, 1731 Cedar Hill Cross Road, and the son of Mrs. H. S. MacDougall, 1815 Hillcrest, and the late Mr. MacDougall.

Standard baskets of pink carnations and white gladioli decorated the church for the ceremony. Mrs. Margaret Bissenden, the soloist, sang "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register. Mr. Stewart gave his daughter in marriage.

Matron of honor Mrs. David

Sweet and bridesmaid Debra Stewart, the bride's sister, wore matching gowns of pink silk chiffon featuring lace bodices, lily point sleeves, and skirts styled with floating panels. Their headpieces were of fabric roses and tulle in tone, and they carried cascade bouquets of white roses. Master Glen Freer acted as ring-bearer for his aunt.

Best man was David Sweet, Richard MacDougall, the groom's brother, and Robert Freer, the bride's brother-in-law, ushered guests to pews marked by pink carnations and white streamers.

At the reception following in Holyrood House vases of Briarcliffe roses flanked the wedding cake which centred the head table. Standard baskets of pink carnations and white gladioli, and bowls of pink carnations also decorated the room. Robert Freer proposed the toast to his sister-in-law.

For travelling, the new Mrs. MacDougall chose a three-piece suit of aqua wool, highlighted by a white fox collar. A pink orchid corsage, accented by the ensemble.

On their return the couple will make their home in the Wedgewood Terrace Apts.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. McGregor of Vancouver, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Walker of Nanaimo, Dr. and Mrs. W. D. McCauley, Robin and Graeme, all of Duncan.

Twin Sisters Are Brides

Baskets of yellow gladioli and orange and red daisies formed the attractive floral setting in Metropolitan United Church for the double wedding of twin sisters Marcia Helena Thors to Mr. Jimmie David Isacson and Maureen Isabel Thors to Mr. Alfred Ross Phillips.

The brides are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Thors, 1287 Derby Road, and the grooms' parents are Mr. and Mrs. F. Isacson, 2496 Millstream Road, and Mrs. Grace Phillips, 1024 Haslam Avenue.

Rev. E. Laura Butler officiated at the double-ring services and Mr. Thors gave his daughters in marriage.

Both the brides were in floor-length gowns of white satin brocade en train. Fashioned on empire lines, the gowns featured sleeves ending in lily points. Their headpieces were tris of satin roses which held chapel veils of scalloped tulle. As jewelry accents, they wore the grooms' gifts of culture pearl necklaces and they carried bouquets of talisman roses and stephanotis.

Maureen's three attendants were in matching gowns of orange peau d'elephant, similar to the bride's. Their headpieces were en tone, edged with aqua tulle and they carried white carnations tipped with aqua. Miss Leona Thors, the bride's sister, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were the Misses Linda Jackson and Toni Rhind. David Ralph Phillips was best man for his brother and ushering the guests were Ted Smith and Andy Cottam Jr.

Similar gowns and headpieces in aqua tones were worn by Marcia's trio of attendants. Maid of honor Miss Maxine Isacson, sister of the groom, and bridesmatrons Mrs. G. Hulls, Maxine's twin sister, and Mrs. R. Isacson, all carried bouquets of white carnations, tipped with aqua.

The best man was Fred A. Isacson and ushers were Raymond Isacson and Gary Hull.

William Rhind proposed the toast to the brides at the reception following in the Union Centre. The head table was centred with two wedding cakes, one decorated in aqua and white, and the other in orange and white to match the attendants' gowns.

Both couples travelled south for their honeymoon trip. For travelling, the brides both chose suits of blue heather wool, trimmed with fur accents. Their hats were en tone, and accessories were white. Gardenias en corsage completed the outfits. Mr. and Mrs. Isacson will be making their home at 2842 Carlow Road, and Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will live at 1024 Haslam Avenue.

City Steals Sidney Crowd

By HUMPHRY DAVY

If Sidney Day on July wasn't as big an event as in other years, it was just as much fun for those who participated.

Some events were curtailed because attendance was low, between 300 and 400. At least 200 of these were teenagers who participated in a teenage dance in the afternoon.

The Tropicana Dance in the evening attracted about 300 people.

The reason for the drop in attendance was the numerous activities taking place simultaneously in Victoria.

Sidney in other years has had July 1 to itself and its celebrations have attracted large crowds.

When all debts are paid, the profit is expected to be about $750, compared to about $2,000 in other years, according to Thomas A. Aiers, vice-president and treasurer of Sanscha.

All proceeds will go towards paying off the $5,025 debt still owing on Sanscha Hall.

More than 60 players from South Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands participated in the Vancouver Island Horseshoe Tournament.

The major award, the Mrs. Clifford Whipple trophy for doubles, went to Tom Sampson of the Brentwood Indian reserve, and Dave Bruce of the Victoria Horseshoe Pitching Association.

Lewis Claxton of Saanich, placed first in B class singles, and Roy Leachman of the Victoria Horseshoe Pitching Association, first in the A Class. Frank Boda and son Tom, were in charge of the contest.

NAIL DRIVERS

In a nail driving contest, Mrs. Betty Hoover, placed first. Runner-up was Mrs. Arthur Freeman, wife of the mayor of Sidney.

In the afternoon, about 200 teenagers whooped it up at a dance in Sanscha Hall.

Earlier, at 11 a.m., the Sidney festivities opened with a parade featuring some colorful floats. It was headed by a pipe band of the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans Association, Branch 302, and a color party from the same unit.

Members of the Royal Canadian Legion, Saanich Peninsula, Branch No. 37, were also well represented.

Floats which won prizes were:

Decorated carts and trucks: 1. Independents, a tropical scene; 2. Peninsula Players, a scene from Quality Street.

Municipal floats: 1. Central Saanich; 2. Esquimalt. Special award to the Victoria float.

Youth Group: 1. Brentwood Lions.

Decorated bicycles for Children: 1. Lindsay Sinclair and Sheila Marshall; 2. Janice Bompas; 3. Kenneth Pedlow.

Judges were Jean Christie, Mrs. G. A. Howard and Frank Minns. Following the parade, the festivities were opened by Mayor Arthur Freeman, assisted by Reeve J. B. Cumming of North Saanich.

NEW GENERATION of Canadians honor the last generation in the Sidney Day parade Saturday. Dragging a confederation cake behind them, these Girl Guides provided just one of many colorful

Youth Jailed For Robbery

NANAIMO—One of three men involved in a robbery at the Golf and Country Club here in January was sentenced to 14 months definite and one year indeterminate in magistrate's court here Friday.

Frank Strazza, 17, pleaded guilty to the offence.

In passing sentence, Magistrate Eric Winch said he was taking into consideration the two months Strazza has already spent in jail awaiting trial.

He recommended the youth be sent to Haney Correctional Institute to learn a trade.

Earlier, two other men involved in the robbery, were also sentenced to jail.

Jules Nepper, 20, was sentenced to three years and the paddle. After an appeal this was changed to four years.

Evidence was that Nepper attacked an elderly watchman at the club, beating him with a piece of wood, a pop bottle and his fists.

Kenneth Wayne Gillespie was sentenced to two years less a day definite and one year indeterminate for his part in the robbery.

The three escaped with two cash registers containing $260 in cash, leaving the watchman laying bleeding on the floor.

Safe Boating Clinic Opens

A travelling safe-boating clinic is visiting resort areas on Vancouver Island in July.

It is at Victoria Lakes all this week.

The unit consisting of a station wagon, motorboat and canoe, will demonstrate latest concepts in small-boat handling, safety techniques and lifesaving methods.

The program is sponsored by the Victoria Fish and Game Association, Leabatt Breweries, New Westminster Motor Products and Sangstercraft Boat Works.

Supervisor of the project is David Boiteau, who has conducted similar programs in Manitoba for the past eight years.

The summer schedule for the safety clinic is:

Elk Lake, July 3-4; Beaver Lake, July 5-6; Thetis Lake, July 7-8; Shawnigan Lake, July 10-11; Lake Cowichan, July 12-13; Fuller Lake, July 17-18; Ganges Yacht Basin, July 19-20; Sproat Lake, July 20-21; Westwood Lake, July 24-25; Comox Lake, July 27-28; Melvor Lake, July 31-Aug. 1.

There is no charge for attendance at the clinics.

When Skin Sags on Face and Neck

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking.

That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

Space Visitors Missing

PORT McNEILL — There were disappointed faces here after the weekend centennial celebrations — no spacemen landed on Port McNeill's flying saucer pad.

"It was very unfortunate," said Gerry Furney, commissioner of this village on the east coast of Vancouver Island. "It would have made our day."

The pad was constructed by volunteer labor over the last few months. It was built after a number of persons in the area reported seeing unidentified flying objects in the night sky.

"It's half a joke, but it's half serious," Mr. Furney said.

"We've had dozens of UFO sightings in the past month."

"Maybe they'll land here, maybe they won't. Still, we had a whopping big parade and a fantastic celebration."

The flying saucer pad is part of a park complex opened Saturday. It is built of compacted earth right behind a local garage.

"We consider the site ideal," Mr. Furney said. "After all, we have all the services — water, fuel, lubricants with a high burning point, telephone, toilet and maps."

Photographers Using Canoe

Well-known Victoria skindiver and photographer Allan Hook is photographing the shipwrecks in the Strait of Juan de Fuca's underwater "graveyard."

Mr. Hook and fellow Victoria diver Bob Clegg left Saturday to canoe down Ninat Lake to the Pacific Ocean and the treacherous entrance to the Straits.

The divers hope to use their film for television and magazines.

Mr. Hook recently won a bronze star in the amateur category of the Mondo Somero International photography competition in Rome.

1,000 Attend Lamb Barbecue

SATURNA ISLAND — About 1,000 persons attended the 18th annual Saturna Lamb Barbecue here Saturday. Proceeds from the barbecue will go toward sending 30 school children from the island to Expo. Twenty-six lambs were cooked.

Border Clash, Student Riots As Korean President Installed

SEOUL (AP)—North Koreans killed seven South Korean soldiers and wounded five from an ambush and 10 Communists were killed in other clashes while U.S. Vice-President Hubert Humphrey and other foreign leaders were in the country for the inauguration of President Chung Hee Park, the army revealed today.

Reports of the attacks in and below the demilitarized zone appeared to have been withheld while the foreign visitors were in Seoul, about 50 miles to the southwest.

As Humphrey paid his farewell call on Park today a few hours before leaving for the United States, thousands of South Korean students resumed their protest that the June 8 parliamentary election was rigged and battled police around Seoul.

Reuters news-agency said police made more than 600 arrests in Seoul. A total of 66 police were reported injured. There was no immediate figure available for student casualties.

Army officials said the ambush occurred Saturday, a few hours after Park was inaugurated for his second term. They said more than 10 North Kore-ans threw hand-grenades and fired submachine-guns at soldiers returning from a meeting and then fled into dense underbrush.

The incident brought to 80 the number of South Koreans and Americans killed in border clashes since they intensified last October just before President Johnson's state visit to Korea.

RETURN TO SCHOOLS

The disturbances began again after most universities in Seoul reopened today on orders of the education ministry. About 40 colleges and 300 high schools across the country shut down three weeks ago during violent demonstrations against election rigging. Seoul National University and the 71 high schools in Seoul stayed closed and three universities announced the start of summer vacation without holding final examinations.

Humphrey's visit included five days of talks with Asian leaders in which he called on their governments to pay a greater share of the cost of economic and social aid to South Vietnam.

Park told Humphrey today he believed Japan should co-operate more in the security of the Asian and Pacific region. Japan is barred by its constitution, though, from providing military aid and Humphrey did not ask for it.

Fires Merge In Labrador Wood Outbreak

GOOSE BAY, Labrador (CP)—There were fewer forest fires in Labrador today than there were 24 hours earlier, but that meant even bigger headaches for hundreds of troops and civilians battling the blazes.

Several "smaller" outbreaks had merged to produce one solid front in some locations.

About 250 troops from Camp Gagetown, N.B., took up positions Sunday alongside 500 to 700 civilians, including resident Indians and Eskimos, and Newfoundland service personnel who have been fighting the fires since last week.

The fires were spread over a broad belt of heavily-forested southern Labrador, including the banks of the Churchill River near the site of construction work on the Churchill Falls hydro project.

The biggest fires and concentrations of fires appeared to be near the Quebec border at Dominion Lake in the pulp-rich Sandwich Bay watershed, at Grand Lake some 20 miles north of here, and at Dubler Lake near the entrance to Lake Melville.

Lightning storms two days last week left the trail of fires and handed provincial forestry officials their biggest fight since the disastrous blazes of 1961, which charred 1,100 square miles of brush.

SURVIVORS ATE ANTS WHILE BUZZARDS WAITED

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters)—An injured survivor of a Brazilian Air Force crash deep in the Brazilian jungle has told a harrowing tale of living among the dead while buzzards swooped on decomposing bodies in a macabre feast.

Air force Sgt. Gilberto Barbosa da Silva told reporters from his hospital bed here about the grim 11-day fight to stay alive by the six survivors of the downed Brazilian C-47 Air Force plane.

The only survivor able to speak coherently, Barbosa described in a shaking voice how they watched the buzzards in horror but saw the wheeling birds of prey as their salvation — signals for rescue planes.

He also said they fed on ants, grasshoppers, termites and larvae after rations found inside the burned-out plane were exhausted.

The plane, carrying 25 persons, was on a mercy supply mission.

After losing his way because of a faulty compass, and with fuel running out, the pilot was forced to make an emergency landing in the jungle shortly before dawn.

But the plane crashed through trees and caught fire, killing 18 persons aboard.

Barbosa said he dived out of the plane through a hole in the fuselage.

He found six other survivors

— all badly injured and all but one unable to walk.

For two days they lay still, only opening their mouths to catch the rain pouring on them.

Finally, they dragged one another to the tail of the plane for shelter, living on burned rations found inside before eating insects.

On the 11th day, an air force search plane spotted the buzzards and discovered the wreck.

WREATH WAS LAID at the Ross Bay Cemetery grave of John Hamilton Gray, only Father of Confederation to be buried in B.C. About 100 persons were at the commemoration services Saturday when Scout Gordon Parker of the 4th Victoria Troop laid a wreath before the small marble headstone.

Father of Confederation Honored by Boy Scouts

A father of Confederation was honored Saturday when Victoria Boy Scouts held a service at his grave in Ross Bay Cemetery.

John Hamilton Gray was one of the 34 Fathers of Confederation who were similarly honored by Scouts all across Canada and the service followed the form laid down by the Boy Scouts of Canada and the Centennial Commission.

In only one respect did it differ.

The service called for the wreath to be laid by a Scout and a descendant of the man being honored but Mr. Gray has no descendants in B.C. (Although buried here he represented Prince Edward Island.)

About 100 people gathered at the grave which was recently refurbished as a Centennial project by the Scouts.

Queen's Scout John Anderson, of the 8th Fort Victoria, read Dr. Frank MacKinnon's Confederation address which dealt with Canada's founding, growth and makeup.

NAMES READ

The same Scout with Peter Harrison of the 7th Fort Victoria Troop read a roll of the fathers of Confederation and the Rev. Murray Henderson, chairman of the 11th Victoria group, said the Lord's Prayer.

Honor of placing the only wreath before the newly polished marble headstone, from which vandals only a few days before broke the cross, fell to Scout Gordon Parker of the 4th Fort Victoria.

Scouts Geoff Phipps and Danny Ryan and Queen's Scouts Don McMillan and Jim Cowie formed the honor guard and Peter Harrison recited the Scout Promise.

Members felt Jagger and Richard "have been treated as scapegoats for the drug problem." The Who released a special album of Jagger-Richard songs as an expression of support.

Teen-agers have been demonstrating in Piccadilly Circus in what looks like a conflict between generations over treatment of the pop idols.

The Times took note of this point, commenting:

"If we are going to make any case a symbol of the conflict between the sound traditional values of Britain and the new hedonism, then we must be sure those sound traditional values include those of tolerance and equity."

The paper felt Jagger had received a more severe sentence than an anonymous youngster would have received. Concerning the specific charge placed against Jagger, the Times said:

"If after his visit to the Pope, the Archbishop of Canterbury had brought proprietary sickness pills at Rome airport and imported the unused tablets to Britain, on his return, he would have risked committing precisely the same offence."

The pills which Jagger was sentenced for possessing were purchased in Italy and brought back by him to England, where a physician's prescription is obligatory for their purchase. In the trial, Jagger's doctor testified that he had authorized use of the pills but had not formally given a prescription. The testimony was not challenged.

LONDON TIMES PROTESTS

SINGER JAILED ON TECHNICALITY

By KARL E. MEYER
The Washington Post

LONDON—The sentencing of Rolling Stone pop singer Mick Jagger to three months in jail on a minor drug offence aroused widespread criticism here with the Times of London taking the unexpectedly strong lead.

In an editorial entitled "Who Breaks a Butterfly on a Wheel?" the Times said Jagger's offence was of a technical character which, before this case drew the point to public attention, any honest man might have been liable to commit.

Jagger, 23, was charged with being in possession of four tablets containing amphetamine sulphate and methyl amphetamine hydrochloride, drugs of a benzidine type.

Keith Richards, 23, who plays lead guitar in the Rolling Stones, was sentenced to a year in prison after being found guilty of permitting his farmhouse to be used for smoking Indian hemp.

Other entertainers have immediately come to the defence of both Jagger and Richards, who are now free on appeal after posting bail totalling $39,200.

The evening papers carried a protest advertisement Saturday published by another pop group, The Who, whose

FOLLOW THIS VICTORIA ENTERTAINMENT GUIDE

BUTCHART GARDENS... SMASHING ENTERTAINMENT EVERY DAY OR EVENING TO SEPT. 3. The highlight of the entertainment season in Victoria. No extra charge, just regular admission into Gardens. MONDAYS, 8:30 p.m. Sparkling stage revue, "Just for Fun," 1967 edition. Brilliantly colorful, fast moving, tremendously entertaining, but only a prelude to the grand show of the evening—romantic illumination of the entire gardens, featuring the fabulous Sunken Garden and the spectacular "Ross Fountains".

For a grand outing—come early, see the gardens by daylight, enjoy a delightful buffet supper, take in the show followed by a tour of the gardens under the romantic night lighting.

TUESDAYS, 8:30 p.m. "Pops" Concert. Featuring the Butchart Gardens "Pops" Orchestra in a program of light classics and Broadway show music. Thirty-piece orchestra under the direction of Howard Denike, with vocalists Ruth Champion and Harry Elsdon. 7:00 and 7:45 p.m., "Zingari" Puppets.

WEDNESDAYS, 8:30 p.m. Sparkling stage revue, "Just for Fun."

THURSDAYS, 8:30 p.m. Scottish and Variety Night. Colorful Scottish Stage Show and Tattoo. Thrill to the pipes and drums as the Canadian Scottish Regiment Band (Princess Mary's) march into and parade in the great Stage Show Garden; famous Victoria Girls' Drill Corps; The Adeline Duncan Scottish Dancers; the "Y" Tumblers; John Dunbar, baritone; Grace Timp, Murray McAlpine and Robin, Norman Winklist, Sheila Woolsey and Brenda Porter, Grace Timp, Dave Fern. 7:00 and 7:45 p.m., "Zingari" Puppets.

FRIDAYS, 8:30 p.m. Sparkling stage revue, "Just for Fun."

SATURDAYS, 7:30 and 9 p.m. "Zingari" Puppets.

SUNDAYS, 2:30 p.m. Recorded music; 3:30 and 4:30 p.m., "Grace Tuckey" Puppets (first show of season, July 9th).

EVERY EVENING AFTER DARK: Romantic illumination of entire gardens.

BUTCHART GARDENS... DELIGHTFUL DINING... ROMANTIC ILLUMINATION. Admitting gates open 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. Lights stay on until midnight. Thirty acres of heavenly beauty! Six gardens in one—fabulous Sunken, Lake Garden featuring the spectacular "Ross Fountains," English Rose, stately Italian, quaint Japanese, plus the great Stage Show Garden. For their world fame and superb beauty, Reader's Digest featured the gardens again this year in the June issue of its big American publication.

DELICIOUS LUNCHES, AFTERNOON TEAS, served daily 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Buffet supper, 5:30 to 7:30, Monday to Friday inclusive. Coffee bar service every day, 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.

ROMANTIC AFTER-DARK ILLUMINATION every evening till midnight. Bathed in the subtle glow of 1,000 hidden lights, the entire 30 acres transformed into a fairyland of indescribable beauty. Be sure to see the "Ross Fountains." Drive out today! Tonight!

ROYAL LONDON WAX MUSEUM—in the Crystal Garden. Swimming Pool building directly across from the rear of the Empress Hotel, a must in Victoria. See over 100 Josephine Tussaud wax figures, direct from London, England. Life size. "They seem alive!" See our new presentation of "Sir Winston Churchill" and our Centennial scene portraying "Rt. Hon. Lester B. Pearson" and "Sir John A. Macdonald," Father of Confederation. See the hall of famous people, the enchanted fairyland, the chamber of horrors. Open daily 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday 12 noon to 10 p.m. 388-4461.

FOREST MUSEUM—best family attraction is closest to home. Just north of Duncan and it's a well worth a special trip. The biggest attraction is a mile-long ride through woods and over a lake cove trestle bridge on a real trolley steam locomotive train. John Mika—Victoria Daily Times, June 24. Open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. seven days a week to the end of September. Turn at Old One Spot Locomotive, one mile North of Duncan.

FABLE COTTAGE—Dreamhouse Hideaway becomes visitors' delight! Take advantage of this rare opportunity to visit one of the world's most unusual homes. Situated on beautiful Cordova Bay just off Highway 17, a few minutes from city centre. 5187 Cordova Bay Road. Open daily 10 a.m. to dusk. Guided tours.

CENTENNIAL SQUARE became a dance floor Saturday as dancers from all over Canada and parts of the United States gathered in Victoria for the July 1 weekend celebrations. Dancers from as far away as New York were in town to dance in the square, at St. Martin's Church Hall and at the Memorial Arena.

Crowd Kick Heels As Century Ends

Bright spectacle of colored shirts and swirling skirts filled Centennial Square Saturday as square dancers from all across Canada swung and dipped in a big Confederation friendship dance.

The Centennial Square Dance Train left Halifax June 24 and by the time it arrived in Vancouver there were 325 dancers aboard including a couple from Oswego, New York.

They arrived in Victoria to be joined by dancers from this city, California, Washington, and the North West Territories.

They got their first taste of B.C. hospitality in Vancouver Friday morning when they received an official welcome from Ald. Tom Alsbury and staged a street dance at the railway terminus before taking the ferry to Vancouver Island.

HEEL-KICKING SPREE Here they took part in the "Cavalcade of the Provinces" parade which started at Mile 0 of the Trans-Canada Highway. Then they were joined by 1,200 Victoria dancers for a great heel-kicking spree in the Memorial Arena.

Saturday they provided bright color for TV cameras in Centennial Square, and in the evening moved back to the Memorial Arena for another swing-dance affair.

The dancers left on the return half of the trip Sunday.

Girls' Band Raising Cash For Expo Trip

The 40-piece Thunderbird Drum Corps is all set to go to Expo... except for a little matter of $4,000.

The all-girl group has eight appearances lined up, six in the Expo Bandshell, one in the Canadian Pavilion and one for Air Canada.

They leave for Montreal August 19 after taking part in the PNE parade in Vancouver that day.

To take the band and four adult supervisors will require $7,600 for air fares. The girls, working over the past year, have raised $3,600 and they will pay for their own board and lodgings while at Expo.

July 14, the group is sponsoring a fund-raising dance at the Red Lion Motor Inn with all proceeds going to the drum corps.

Cribbens At the Movies

TO SIR WITH LOVE
Sociological Drama
Odeon Theatre

Sidney Poitier gives yet another poignantly human performance as a Negro teacher working in a London slum, who tames an unruly class of teen-agers, cleans their minds of racial prejudice and imbues them with middle-class aspirations.

It could be called a study in sociology and sunshine. The young swingers defend themselves against adult criticism with:

"They're pretty well messed up the world, haven't they, Sir?"

Poitier counters by treating them as adults. They must call him "Sir"; address each other as Mr. and Miss and observe rules of decorum in dress and deportment.

The story, based on a novel by E. R. Braithwaite, has been capably produced, directed and written for the screen by James Clavell—and those who saw the sneak preview at the Odeon last week seemed to like what they saw.

At the outset, Poitier is a qualified engineer, unable to get a job because of his Negro origin, who takes a teaching job in an East End London school.

Abandoning the regular curriculum, Poitier conducts open discussions on any topic which interests the youngsters.

There are still racial tensions, but these are subdued as "Sir" gradually wins the admiration of his charges. There are setbacks, of course and one or two unlikely situations, but the outcome is logical, satisfying, and credible.

YOU ONLY LIVE TWICE
Capitol Theatre

For those who can stand another James Bond, Sean Connery's fifth performance in the role offers a full quota of espionage, intrigue, suspense, thrills and the usual gimmickry.

It is said to be Connery's final appearance as Bond, and the story by Ronald Dahl tells of his attempt to track down and destroy an arch fiend in the mountains of Japan whose rockets swallow up U.S. and Russian space crafts.

Three Students Cycling to Expo

Three Victoria youths will spend five weeks cycling across Canada this summer on their way to Expo.

They are Bill Schmuck, 18, of 1140 Rock Street, Berni Wille, 17, 940 Lake View Avenue, and Mike Percy, 18, of 1789 Rockland Avenue.

The trio, who graduated from St. Louis College this year, will leave Saturday using special five-speed bicycles for the trip, and taking with them only sleeping bags, ground sheets, a few extra clothes and a minimum of cooking utensils.

The boys plan to arrive at Montreal early in August after camping at campsites and parks along the way. They will purchase a car there for the trip home.

All three plan to attend the University of Victoria this fall.

Wildest Ride

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bus driver Elmer Thompson, 43, had the wildest ride of his 18-year career Saturday when the bus he was driving lost its brakes and rolled backwards five blocks, through a red light and into a row of parked cars. Mr. Thompson was not injured, and there was no one else aboard.

Kidney Transplant Problems

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

As many people have found, there are a number of very perplexing problems about getting a kidney for transplantation, when one's own kidneys have largely failed to function. In an editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association (AMA) there is an excellent summary of the present situation in regard to this problem. As the editor says, while he has no desire to minimize the tremendous advances that have been made in this field, by able and devoted and dedicated surgeons and others, "the operation is bedeviled by complications."

The first one, of course, is that the recipient, or body of the man who is going to receive the kidney from someone else is bound to show a lot of resistance to the foreign body. It will try to destroy the incoming kidney, and to throw it out, much as it would throw out an entering bad germ or virus.

The only exception to this is when the kidney being donated comes from an identical twin. Two alike-twins are made of one ovum, and hence their body chemistries are the same. Sometimes when the kidney is donated by some member of the family, there is a somewhat greater-than-usual chance of its being accepted, but still in many cases it is not accepted.

Today, great efforts are being made with the help of laboratory tests to recognize the person whose kidney may perhaps be accepted without too much resistance. As the editor says, "The recipient, whose body cells recognize the implant as a 'non-self' is hardly a gracious host. Unless the donor and the patient are monovalent (alike) twins the transplanted kidney is not apt to enjoy a prolonged stay without the aid of drugs which suppress immune processes. Nor, once rejected, has the transplant much chance of paving a way for a more fortunate successor." In other words, if one kidney is thrown out, the chance of getting another one to stay are not good.

For long, great efforts have been made with X-rays and drugs to destroy the immune reactions of the recipient body, but this is not an entirely admirable end to be sought. As one destroys the ability of a body to reject a kidney, one also impairs its ability to fight off invasion by bad germs.

As a result, the man who has received a kidney may lose his life because of infections that spring up which he has little power of resistance. In some cases, the new kidney soon becomes injured by much the same disease that destroyed his original two kidneys.

Very important is what the editor goes on to say so wisely: "The patient, the donor of the kidney, is a web of ethical and psychological perplexities which can be very difficult to resolve. There can be anxiety when the gift is offered, regret if it proves futile, and remorse when it is refused. These are some of the emotions which precede, accompany, or follow the fateful decision."

But as the editor goes on to say, renal transplantation offers much hope for the future. Great efforts are being made in laboratories all over the world and in operating rooms to overcome the difficulties, formidable as they are.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Can the size of the whole universe be figured?

There are questions, many questions, for which we have only partial answers. We must wait until more research can give us fuller details, and scientific proof. There are other questions that will never be answered. These topics are so immense that the human mind cannot grasp them.

Today's question is about one of those impossible topics. The whole universe, of course, includes everything Out There in space. It stretches on and on without end. And this is one of those immense concepts that even the best human brain cannot grasp. Nevertheless, sooner or later, the problem pops into every questioning mind. We hear of the distant, sprawling galaxies scattered like immense islands through the vast reaches of space. And we wonder where, where oh where, does this cosmic universe end.

When a better telescope is built, it probes farther into space. Its photographs reveal more remote galaxies and an unknown realm of the cosmos becomes known. Radiotelescopes catch sound signals from the same far regions of the dim distance. This or that new instrument surely will reach the outside edge of space, the limits of the universe, or so we hope. But this very notion poses another problem, an impossible problem.

Suppose you could measure the miles to the end of the universe and visualize its outer limits as a sort of fence. A health human mind bounds with curiosity that is never contentedly satisfied. The answer to one good question can bet your boots that your mind has the next question all ready to pop into your head. You will think of that fence and start wondering what is on the other side of it. So we go probing for the next fence and the next, and so on.

Seek More Answers

This endlessness is a concept called infinity. We cannot grasp it in the same way our minds grasp the numbers, shapes and sizes of math problems. However, mathematicians can use the concept of infinity to solve complicated equations. They use a sign for infinity to solve complicated equations. It is shaped like a figure eight lying on its side. We do not have to grasp a concept in order to make use of it. After all, we used electrical power long before scientists figured out the nature of its causes.

In the meantime, our very smart astronomers and astro-physicists continue to probe farther and farther into the universe. The size of the known universe covers only the realms we have reached with our present equipment and brainpower. Our 200-inch telescope can photograph light and a big radiotelescope can gather sounds from up to six billion light years away. At this distance we reach the limit of the known universe. Each light year equals almost six million, million earth miles. And all this known cosmic realm is populated with millions of starry galaxies.

Scientists are people who quest for answers and more answers. They are sensible people, full of curiosity about sensible subjects. When a sensible problem is hard, they do not give up the quest. They do not quit even when the final answer is proved ungraspable, as is today's topic. Instead, they grasp what they can, use it and push on to learn more. Often they use math to figure concepts beyond the grasp of human minds.

Andy sends a 14" World Book Globe to Larry Beck, age 7, of Ferguson, Missouri, for his question:

Does the Big Dipper change? The Big Dipper marches in a circle around Polaris, the North Star, once every day takes 24 hours. Each round trip takes 24 hours. Sometimes we see it higher than the North Star and sometimes it is lower in the sky. But wherever it is, it points out the north direction. The two bright stars opposite the handle of the heavenly dipper form a line that leads you on over the sky. The line leads right to Polaris and this bright star shows the direction of the north pole.

All the stars move through the vast heavens and most of them travel at breakneck speeds. We do not notice them change their positions, but they do. If we watched a million years, we would see some great changes in our starry skies. The stars of the Big Dipper are moving in different directions. In 100,000 years it will be all out of shape.

ISLANDER AMID THE HULLABALOO

Centennial Mania Sweeps Over Nation's Capital

By JOHN MKA
Times Staff Reporter

OTTAWA—(Observations, mental and visual, of an Islander on Parliament Hill, Dominion Day, 1967.)
The age is the message and it says we're 100 years young.

Tots and teens, children everywhere:
Laughing, crying, running, sitting, sprawling, tugging, singing, cheering, sleeping, shouting, whispering, smoking, dancing, marching, jumping, searching, waving, whistling, swearing, smiling;
Scrambling over state lawns, daring traffic in confederation square, sneaking through police lines, standing head and shoulders tall above the queues and still curled inside the womb, bellying out maternity dresses.
They were in the capital by the thousand, native and visiting, and while the adults celebrated the past solemnly they toasted the future with pop, ice cream, birthday cake and a welcoming yell for the Queen.

A young boy started it when he took a seat beside former Governor-General Vincent Massey on the dais for dignitaries greeting the Queen on arrival at the airport tarmac because he wanted a good view.
He talked "stuff" with Mr. Massey, then threw the monarch a snappy salute that caught her eye and made her, first, blink then smile broadly.

Next day, I watch a spots-ahired youngster about 10 playing at an open second-storey casement of the prime minister's suite in the east block, possibly one of his many grandsons.

He is clicking off shots aimlessly with a plastic pistol when he notices a stiff red coat, guarding the entrance below, looking up over his shoulder to locate the noise.
Slowly, staring back, the boy trains his pistol with deliberate care and gets his moustache with one shot. Grinning triumphantly, he disappears from the window.
Ottawa is ablaze with color and astir with excitement.

An incredible array of flags and bunting, from pastel hues of centennial banners to bold vivid national and royal colors, lines every official driveway, overhangs every portal, dresses every stone wall, festoons every rooftop, drapes every streetlight standard.

Scaffolding platforms for television cameras, long distance microphones, spotlights, press cameramen, announcers, sprout from lawns and building tops on all sides. One cameraman even dangles from the extended boom end of a high rise construction crane towering near the national cenotaph while the Queen lays the royal wreath.

He is lowered after the ceremony, missing a shot of two mounties racing to guard the wreath as a chunk of the crowd breaks and surges up the steps to gaze and snap the sad token. Inundated, the red coats and the base of the monument disappear under the press of people. Two hours later, looking weary, the mounties are still trying to control a flock of sightseers. An hour later—only a few linger and a commissioner is relief guard.

Uniforms of all description infiltrate the masses of civilians, a colorful army themselves with gaudy miniskirts, Bermuda shorts, paisley pants, weird sunglasses, bare chets, beanie mops, bald pates.

The intent civil servants rushing home, finished for the holiday, break their orderly lines and dart pellmell to the roadside barricades as they hear the skirl of pipes. Around the corner come highland pipers and drummers, ranks of guards in red coats and bearskin hats, contingents of white dressed tars, khaki uniformed soldiers and airmen.

But it's only a brief, impromptu parade. Mess call has sounded and they're marching off to supper. The crowd melts slowly, its mood suddenly gay.

Some wander down Sparks Street pedestrian mall where gleeful children play in the fountains, grownups shelter on benches under trees, barefoot hippies puddle ankle-deep in the pools and a young girl strums a guitar by a display case of paintings.

The great day at last. Brilliant sunshine confounding the thunderstorm predictions loses throughs eager for a happening.

Good natured, casually dressed but not in extreme styles, they come on foot from all directions, Parliament Hill drawing them like a magnet out of the stone canyons and onto the wide expanse of green grass, soon overflowing with a wide expanse of white faces.

As always, the undulating rolls of applause, rustling the lines like a hoarse wind, traces the progress of the royal motorcade. A cheer bursts forth as the Royal standard of Canada replaces the maple leaf atop the Peace Tower.

The ceremonial flourishes of the Royal Anthem catch the self-conscious rows of special guests by surprise as some stand, some crouch undecided and others sit resolutely only to spring to attention in delayed confusion—all awkward in their exposed platform positions.

On the ground, children chatter, youths focus binoculars, amateurs struggle with cameras. As more hundreds arrive, some watch, others gossip, everyone circulates in search of a better position.

The crowd buzzes steadily like a cluster of bees, but meaning no disrespect, even while the Queen reads her speech.

A long, white banner wiggles over the mass of heads. It says "I'm proud to be a Canadian" on one side. On the other, "Je suis fier d'être Canadien." "It's our centennial project," says one of the five students from MacDonald High School 20 miles from Montreal who made it and brought it here to hold high.

They are Robert Gibson, 17, Gloria Ness, 17, Diane Morrison, 17, Nancy Dunton, 16, Gordon Baker 17.

Downpour

MONTREAL (CP)—Expo crowds cheered the Queen this morning as she opened a rain-soaked tour of the world fair under heavy security guard.

She was greeted by Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec and Premier John Robarts of Ontario at their provinces' pavilions.

Police were watchful, remembering demonstrations by separatists when the Queen visited Quebec in November, 1964.

Security arrangements were disrupted, however, when the Queen took an unscheduled 45-minute mini-rail tour of the entire site.

She was about to leave when she asked Prime Minister Pearson if she couldn't see the entire show.

Mr. Pearson agreed and they boarded the mini-rail which circles the fair.

The tour by the umbrella-carrying Queen and rain-coated Prince Philip to the Quebec and Ontario pavilions came in mid-morning after they arrived for the world fair visit at 9:30 a.m. aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

Thickly-overcast weather and rain greeted the royal couple. The Queen drove in a black closed car to Notre Dame section of Expo past the high, glass-walled Soviet pavilion, one of the fair's most impressive.

SEE BRITISH DISPLAY

Her tour took her to the British pavilion with its mini-skirted hostesses, to the Western pavilion with its 100-ton logging truck about which Prince Philip asked questions, and on to Quebec's bodice pavilion and Ontario's, one of the fair's best with architecture described as like a great spider fighting under a piece of cloth.

he Queen travelled from the British to Western pavilions in a trailer train called La Balade that travels the fairground pavements. Glass was installed on the side of the Balade so the Queen shared with Pierre Dupuy, Expo commissioner-general.

In the Quebec pavilion, which many call highly-intellectual because of its founds and sight, the Queen was greeted by Premier Johnson. He escorted her about, explaining in French points of interest, including a color movie on a huge screen that blasts out its message about developing Quebec industry.

A luxuriously-bound book about the island of Orleans in the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City was presented as a memento to the Queen as well as a quantity-shaped object that seemed to puzzle her until she was told it was a paper-cutter.

The weather was clearing when Premier Johnson escorted

Fighting Erupts At Canal

From AP-Reuters

Egyptian and Israeli troops clashed at the Suez Canal for the third straight day today.

The Israeli Army said Egyptian troops on the canal's west bank lobbed mortars and fired machine-guns for 20 minutes at Israeli soldiers on the east bank near El Quantara, about 25 miles from the canal's northern entrance.

Israel, which captured nearly all of Egypt east of the canal in the June 5-10 war, reported three such mortar and machine-gun attacks Sunday on its positions near El Quantara. The Israelis said they silenced the Egyptian gunners each time.

The two sides clashed Saturday night on the east bank. Egypt claimed its men had been there all along. Israel said about 100 Egyptians had crossed the canal and penetrated about nine miles into the Sinai Peninsula before being driven back across the waterway.

Israeli military men interpreted the new outbreak as an attempt by Egyptian President Nasser to rally his shattered army against the threat of an Israeli invasion.

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The UN General Assembly neared a vote today on the Middle East crisis as sponsors of two rival resolutions vied for the two-thirds majority necessary for approval.

BIG MOMENT of the July 1 celebrations at Legislative Buildings Saturday came when Rear Admiral John A. Charles presented hand-rearred flag to Premier Bennett during ceremonies which included parade of men of all branches of the armed forces, a march past, and a fly-past by air force jets from Comox. (More July 1 celebration pictures and stories on Page 14.)

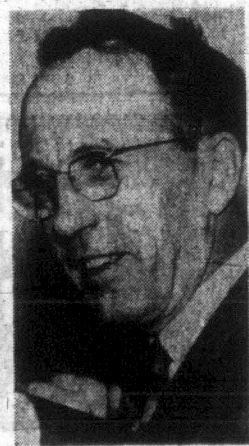

Canada Timid on Viet Due to U.S. Tie—NDP

TORONTO (CP)—T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, aroused a party convention today with charges that dependence on the United States has made the Canadian government timid on the Vietnam war.

In his keynote address at the opening of the party's fourth national convention, he said Canada is becoming an economic colony of the U.S. its capacity for "independent action in world affairs" is being reduced to zero.

Fairly subdued to that point, the packed hotel convention hall erupted into applause as the socialist leader derided the "ambivalent" Canadian role in the war.

He said Canada should ask other countries to join in a declaration calling for an unconditional end to the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

DOUGLAS...stirs convention

The Americans are "seeking to foist on the people of South Vietnam a government of rapacious landlords, military dictators and discredited collaborators of a colonial regime."

As he has in the past, Mr. Douglas said he is not suggesting that Canada be anti-American, but Canada must regain control of its own economy to allow it to pursue an independent role.

MORTGAGE ON HOUSE

The Liberal government's attitude on Vietnam is understandable, he said. "It is in the position of a man who hesitates to offend a wealthy neighbor because the neighbor has a mortgage on his house."

Mr. Douglas said Canada did not escape from one form of colonialism "only to fall into a more subtle and sinister one."

He was interrupted 22 times by applause in the wide-ranging speech, largely a rundown on NDP economic and social goals. There was no mention of nationalization in the 22-page speech, but Mr. Douglas reaffirmed the party view that government intervention and government ownership must play an important role in Canadian life.

In keeping with the moderate tone of the stage-setting address, he said there will always be "a major role" for private and co-operative enterprise.

WIRE BRIEFS

Road Deaths Hit 99

TORONTO (CP)—Multiple-fatality accidents in Ontario, Quebec and Saskatchewan sent the Dominion Day holiday accidental-death total in Canada soaring this weekend with at least 99 deaths recorded by 10 a.m. EDT today.

Second H-Bomb?

TOKYO (Reuters)—A Japanese news agency said China may have detonated its second hydrogen bomb at Lop Nor in western Sinkiang province today.

Miners Rescued

MANILA (Reuters)—Twenty-three miners—cold, hungry but alive—were dug out from tons of mud and rock today after being trapped for five days in cramped, dark tunnels about 4,000 feet below the surface. Rescue workers dug frantically towards 18 others believed still trapped at the Phillex mines in mountainous 235 miles north of here.

Food Strike Over

HONG KONG (UPI)—Hong Kong leftists ended their four-day general food strike today by allowing a flood of foodstuffs to cross over from the farmers of China's Kwangtung Province.

Pompidou in Moscow

MOSCOW (Reuters)—French Premier Georges Pompidou arrived by air today for a six-day official visit to the Soviet Union.

Arsenal Explodes

TEL AVIV, Israel (Reuters)—At least three persons were killed and 15 injured in a series of violent explosions which rocked western Galilee today after fire broke out at an ammunition depot near the city of Acre.

Nazi Judge Jailed

BERLIN (Reuters)—Hans-Joachim Reine, 64-year-old former Nazi judge, was sentenced to five years' hard labor today for abetting in murder by passing death sentences at the People's Court during the Second World War.

Cong Kill 51

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. marines were badly mauled in a clash near the neutral zone when they misjudged the strength of Communist forces, a U.S. military spokesman said today. At least 51 marines were killed, 34 are missing and 170 were wounded.

MONTREAL (CP)—Queen Elizabeth today suggested that Canada's experiment with the problems of creating a unified country with cultural, social and language differences could be its greatest future gift to the world.

"The experiment that has been conducted for 100 years in this country, with some failures of course, but with increasing hopefulness, cannot leave our torn era indifferent," she said in a luncheon address at Canada's pavilion at Expo 67.

Her Majesty delivered that portion of her address dealing with unity and diversity in French.

MANY SEEK COHESION

So many nations today, she said, seek "to create a cohesiveness which both respects and unites the multiplicity of their internal divergences."

"This transformation is something painful. Canadians have discovered how much of generosity and political imagination it requires. They have learned that the greatness of any country or group is to be found in what it gives to the world."

Canadians deliberately chose cultural and social diversity and from the dawn of Confederation undertook to respect their differences. While concerned with unity and modern things, they remained profoundly faithful to their origins.

EACH ENRICHES ALL

"They intend to continue as witnesses of two great European civilizations, witnesses of all Europe on American soil. The legacy of each group is the enriching of all."

"In the fruitful dialogue between its national cultures, Canada sees an essential mark of its own identity, a condition of its survival."

'HANG-LOOSE GENERATION' SKETCHED

On the occasion of Canada's 100th birthday, columnist Peter C. Newman has sketched a profile of the new generation which will set the political pattern for Canada's second century.

By the time the next federal election is called, some 57 per cent of the country's population will be under 30 years old.

The article on page 5 of today's Times examines the ethics, the tempo and the aspirations of the "hang-loose generation," and the new kind of politics that will be required to re-involve it in the process of Canadian nation building.

TWO OTHERS IN B.C. GET IRISH PRIZES

Island Family Excited With $60,000 Win

A Campbell River man won $60,000 in the running of the Irish Derby at Curragh, Ireland, Saturday.

Robert Walker, former owner of a stationery store, held a ticket on second place horse Sucaryl.

He is married and has two children.

David, 21, is enrolled in a business management course at the British Columbia Institute of Technology. Joan, 19, is a secretary at the Campbell River hospital.

Mr. Walker said the entire family is "surprised and excited."

"I've been buying sweepstakes tickets for over 12 years," he said.

Except for a trip to Expo

and a visit with a brother in Halifax, the Walkers have no immediate plans.

Since selling his stationery business, Mr. Walker hasn't decided what he will do next. He plans to invest his winnings for the time being.

Two other British Columbia residents also won $60,000.

Rex Lupton, of Westbank, near Kelowna, also won a second place $60,000.

Owner of a real estate business, he intends to invest the money in his firm.

A psychiatric nurse at Riverview Hospital near Coquitlam, Mrs. Ethel Miller, held a ticket on the third place horse, Dart Board. She won $30,000.

No one in B.C. held a ticket on the winner, Ribicco. Eight Canadians won the $150,000 top prize.

Four Victorians and three other Vancouver Island residents drew tickets on horses not running.

They will receive $1,300 consolation prizes.

'Bomber' Douses Forest Fire

A 25-acre forest fire atop Mount Finlayson provided a spectacle for hundreds of weekend drivers on the Malahat.

The B.C. Forest Service has a 20-man crew up the mountain with three bulldozers maintaining a guard of the fire which, officials say, is under control. Between 400 and 500 people crowded the highway just above Hall's Boat Rental and the RCMP had a special patrol out to control crowds and keep traffic moving.

One spectator watched the Canoe water bomber dive below the cable strung across the Finlayson Arm three times to pick up a load of water then fly over the fire and make a drop. "I've seen some pretty accurate low-level, pin-point bombing during the war," he said, "but this is magnificent."

A forest service official said the bomber might be needed again today but it was unlikely.

OTHER ACCIDENTS

In other weekend crashes, Mrs. Doreen Campbell, 46, of 3409 Shelbourne, is in fairly good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital after a two-car accident on the Trans-Canada Highway near Belgrave shortly before midnight Sunday. She suffered head and rib injuries when her car was struck from behind by another auto and veered off the road into a rock outcrop.

Damage was estimated at $3,500. Saanich police said both Mrs. Campbell's car and that of Robert James Russell, 27, of 2805 Forbes, were eastbound at the time of the accident.

Four-year-old Stephen Hunt of 2627 Blanshard was treated for head and leg injuries and later released from Royal Jubilee Hospital when struck by a car Friday afternoon. Police said the little boy was crossing Blanshard near his house. Driver of the car involved was identified as Ronald Sweett, 721 Chesterlea. He was headed north on Blanshard.

A two-car crash at the Trans-Canada Highway and Burnside Sunday evening sent a woman passenger to hospital and caused an estimated $700 damage.

Mrs. John Connolly of 4070 Braefoot suffered cuts and bruises and is reported in good condition.

She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, who received a badly bruised hand when his auto was in collision with a car driven by Robert Schmidt, 232 Superior.

Doctors Quit Autopsy Work Until Ordered

Nanaimo Man Found Drowned

A young Nanaimo fisherman, Terry Mearnes, 23, was found drowned off the west coast of Orcas Island Sunday, three days after picking up a new fishing boat in Vancouver.

The boat with the deck awash was found nearby.

The body was discovered by the United States Coast Guard. Mr. Mearnes had picked up the boat from a Vancouver shipyard Wednesday and had not been heard from since.

Orcas Island is 24 miles north-east of Victoria.

Doctors are borrowing the trade union "work to rule" device in a fight for higher pay for coroners' postmortems.

British Columbia Medical Association has sent letters to all British Columbia physicians, asking them to join in a fee protest.

The strategy calls for all doctors to refuse to provide professional services for a coroner unless formally ordered to do so under authority of the Coroner's Act.

The letter says the present fees payable for post mortems have been unchanged since 1923. The Attorney-General's department has assured the BCMA that it was recognized the fees are inadequate.

(The act sets a fee of $25 per autopsy.)

ADVISED A-G.

The CMA said it advised the A-G's department May 15 that after July 1 pathologists would be unwilling to continue holding autopsies, at less than BCMA fee levels. (These were not specified.)

However, the letter states: "The Coroner's Act is extraordinary in that it is the only act known to us whereby a professional man can be ordered, under penalty, to perform a professional service."

A doctor may refuse if he has "a reasonable excuse."

The letter adds, "Doctors should make it clear to their respective coroners that they will no longer perform services under the Coroner's Act unless under specific coroner's order."

'AS BEST HE CAN'

"If such order is made, coroners will be advised that a doctor will obey as best he can and fulfil his legal duty, even though he considers the whole process unjust and antiquated."

The letter also points out that any doctor may be ordered to do this work although many may not have done so for many years.

"Doctors in receipt of a coroner's order should make it clear in their subsequent report precisely what their qualifications are for performing the work they are made to do."

Youth Guilty of 'Mischief'

A youth who caused an estimated $200 damage after entering an Esquimalt house appeared in central court Friday. Gerald McDonald, 1421 Harrison, pleaded guilty and will be sentenced July 11 for causing mischief.

Court was told he smashed the glass and a door panel at 519 Craigflower June 18 and threw kitchen utensils around before police arrived.

Upper Floor Lost In Fire At Oak Bay

Fire destroyed the roof and the upper interior of an Oak Bay home, Sunday.

Firemen were called to the home of W. G. Lynch at 1972 St. Ann about 11.30 a.m. Fire broke out after some papers had been burned in a downstairs fireplace. The fire spread up the wall into attic space and down another wall.

One water pipe burst due to the fire, and wiring was destroyed.

Mr. Lynch said that three upstairs rooms will have to be rebuilt and work is required on downstairs walls and ceilings where water damage occurred. The roof, open to the sky, must be replaced.

Cost of repairs have not been estimated.

Man Felled By Smoke From Bedding

An elderly man whose mattress caught fire Friday afternoon as he smoked in bed is reported in fair condition at Veterans' Hospital today.

John Myers, 69, a tenant at 159 South Turner, managed to stagger from the house but then collapsed when overcome by smoke.

A fireman was also injured and a dog locked in a porch was rescued by police. The blaze caused an estimated $4,000 damage.

Fireman Ernie Byrnell suffered a cut hand when he broke a window. He was stitched up at St. Joseph's Hospital and later released.

City police said an explosion which touched off a fire in a shack on Connaught around noon Saturday was caused by a can of gunpowder blowing up.

DAMAGE LIGHT

Owner of the building in the 700-block, Max Lohbrunner, master of the foundered whaler Green in the inner harbour, told officers he knew nothing of the gunpowder. Damage was reported as light.

A chandelier fire in a house at 643 John St. shortly before 4 a.m. Saturday set off a treasure hunt for some missing money.

Wilfred Philibert told officers $250 that had been in his wallet was missing. The hunt turned up a bundle of charred bills. Mr. Philibert was advised to take them to a bank for exchange.

Damage from the fire was light.

Local Students Win $1,200 Federal Awards

Two young wildlife biologists from Victoria area have been awarded $1,200 Canadian Wildlife Service scholarships by the federal government.

Stanley W. Speller, 24, a graduate of the University of Victoria, now completing an M.Sc. degree at Carleton University, will enter a Ph. D. program at University of Saskatchewan. His thesis will be on the denning behavior of the arctic fox.

Frederick J. Tarasoff, 22, of Cobble Hill, will complete his M.Sc. at UBC. He is studying the basis relationship between seals and certain related terrestrial mammals.

The purpose of the scholarship program, which allows biologists to continue graduate studies, is to attract trained biologists into the wildlife field.

Playful Wind Tangles Spinnakers As 300 Yachts Fight for Position

By TERRY IZZARD

A light wind proved an ill wind for several of the 300 yachts taking part in the Pacific International Yachting Association regatta here at the weekend.

Two boats ended up on the rocks off Gordon Head while others tried madly to untangle their spinnakers.

Yet another, the Diamond Head, biggest boat in the race, became so frustrated with the situation that skipper Henry Kotkin, of Seattle, took off without ever finishing.

CLEAR SKIES

Otherwise, the race lived up to its name as the biggest, most colorful sailing spectacle of the Pacific Northwest.

More than 300 boats are registered for the four-day event.

With a light northwesterly blowing, it wasn't long before spinnakers began blossoming in the crowded field.

As the smaller classes darted between the bigger boats, a number of spinnaker sheets became tangled, adding to the confusion of an already tight-knit field.

One yacht which didn't have to worry about crowding was the Mary Bower owned by John Long of Royal Vancouver Yacht Club.

A veteran of many PIYA and racing races, she skipped into the lead at the starter's gun and held the spot over the entire 15-mile course for first boat over the line and first on corrected time in the A class.

First Victoria boat over the line was Jack Smith in his converted 8-metre yacht, Reality.

In the shorter 12½-mile race for Thunderbirds, Ned Ashe of Victoria gave T. Pape of Corinthian Yacht Club of Seattle a run for his money.

In a close finish, Mr. Pape, in Kiwa, got a slight edge over Mr. Ashe's May D II, to grab first place on corrected time.

Taking fourth place was another Victoria boat, Hussy, owned by Dave Anstey.

SUNDAY UNLUCKY

Sunday's races provided most mishaps.

First to get into trouble was Maradea owned by W. Burgess of Royal Vancouver Yacht Club. His 36-foot craft ran on to a rock off Gordon Head Point.

The crew managed to rock and push its way clear and damage was slight.

Second to go was Picnic owned by Gordie Inglis of Victoria.

He also went aground on a submerged rock and his boat was out of the race today being inspected on the ways.

Further marring Sunday's racing were several protests.

One of the protests was lodged as result of an incident at the starting line off Gordon Head.

The other three resulted from incidents at turning points along the five-mile triangular course.

Officials were considering the protests this morning and results of Sunday's races were still not known at press time.

ENDS TUESDAY

Races end Tuesday evening when overall winners will be announced at Royal Victoria Yacht Club, this year's host club.

The Party's Over But the Holiday Lingers on

They didn't roll up the sidewalks in Victoria this morning. But they may as well have.

A few tourists aimlessly wandered the streets looking for a store from which to buy souvenirs — or a coffee shop for breakfast.

A long search may reveal the latter although most of the city lay as quiet as Ross Bay cemetery on a Sunday morning.

Some restaurants were open, but at 10 o'clock this morning most had closed doors.

The only general stores open were corner stores dispensing the basic staples.

B.C. Hydro buses, running a regular weekday schedule, were carrying at the most two or three passengers.

Bastion Square was deserted.

Centennial Square was hosting four obvious camera-dangling tourists. And it was early for the hippies.

City hall, the legislative buildings and the post office were closed.

So were the major department stores which waited in vain Friday for an announcement from Attorney General Robert Bonner telling them that they could open today without fear of prosecution.

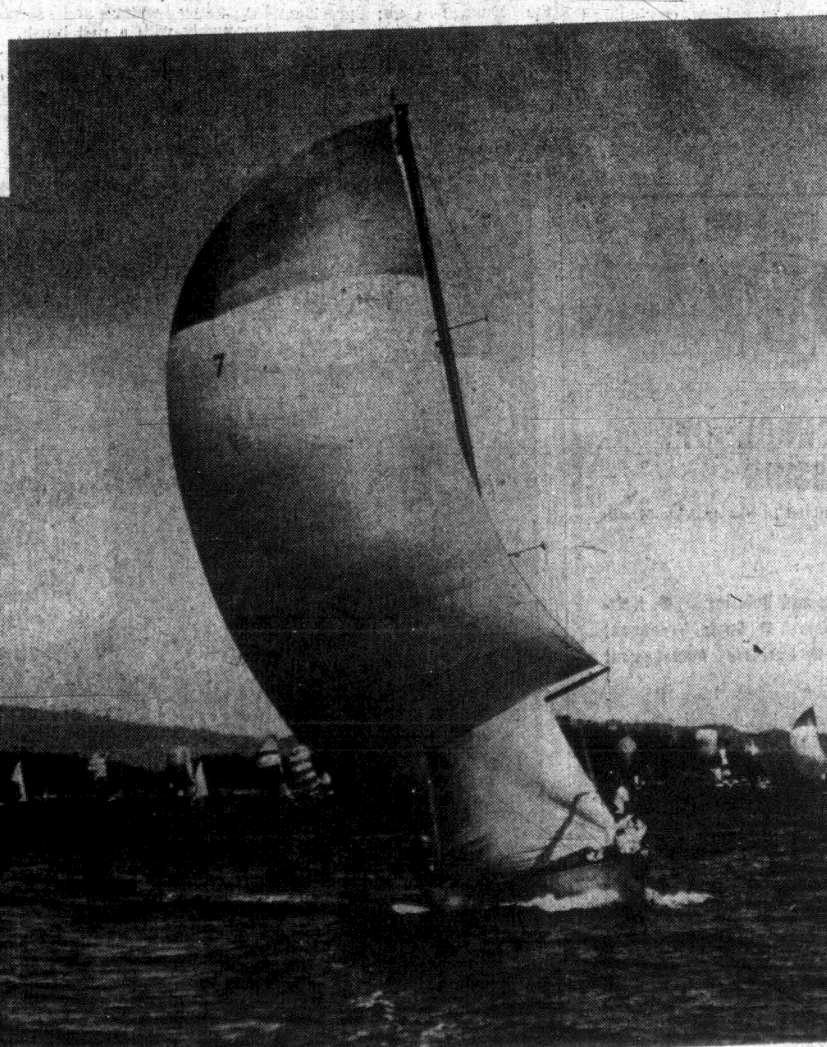

The announcement eventually came, but too late for stores which prepare advertising a minimum of two days ahead of a selling season.

Mr. Bonner's announcement, late Friday afternoon, stated that local government's could determine their own policy on whether retailers should open or close.

If it was far too late for the stores it was also too late for most civic governments to make a decision or an announcement.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said he felt the responsibility very definitely belonged to the provincial government but added that Victoria council would not prosecute anyone who opened for business today.

Having to delay that decision until Mr. Bonner, visiting his constituents in the Cariboo, had given a provincial ruling, Mayor Stephen's assurance was also too late to widely effect the deadline decision of major retailers.

FORGING INTO THE LEAD, the position she held throughout Saturday's long-distance race, is the Mary Bower. Result of relatively light winds can be seen in background with boats huddled together in tight formation. By the time they neared end of 5-mile course, several yachts were virtually becalmed. PIYA regatta continues today and Tuesday. (Photo by James A. McVie.)

ISLANDER AMID THE HULLABALOO

... SPOTS ONLY TWO INDIANS IN THE CROWDS

Centennial Mania Sweeps Over Nation's Capital

By JOHN MIKA
Times Staff ReporterOTTAWA—(Observations, mental and visual, of an Islander on Parliament Hill, Dominion Day, 1967.)
The age is the message and it says we're 100 years young.Tois and teens, children everywhere:
Laughing, crying, running, walking, sitting, sprawling, tugging, singing, chewing, cheering, shouting, whispering, smoking, dancing, marching, jumping, searching, waving, whistling, swearing, smiling;

Scrambling over state lawns, daring traffic in Confederation Square, sneaking through police lines, standing head and shoulders tall above the queues and still curled inside the womb, belying out maternity dresses.

They were in the capital by the thousand, native and visiting, and while the adults celebrated the past solemnly they toasted the future with pop, ice cream, birthday cake and a welcoming yell for the Queen.

A young boy started it when he took a seat beside former Governor-General Vincent Massey on the dais for dignitaries greeting the Queen on arrival at the airport tarmac because he wanted a good view.

He talked "stuff" with Mr. Massey, then threw the monarch a snappy salute that caught her eye and made her, first, blink then smile broadly.

Next day, I watch a sports-shirted youngster about 10 playing at an open second-storey casement of the prime minister's suite in the east block, possibly one of his many grandsons.

He is clicking off shots aimlessly with a plastic pistol when he notices a stiff red coat, guarding the entrance below, looking up over his shoulder to locate the noise.

Slowly, staring back, the boy trains his pistol with deliberate care and gets his mountie with one shot. Grinning triumphantly, he disappears from the window.

Ottawa is ablaze with color and astir with excitement.

An incredible array of flags and bunting, from pastel hues of centennial banners to boldly vivid national and royal colors, lines every official driveway, overhangs every portal, dresses every stone wall, festoons every rooftop, drapes every streetlight standard.

Scaffolding platforms for television cameras, long distance microphones, spotlights, press cameramen, announcers, sprout from lawns and building tops on all sides. One cameraman even dangles from the extended boom end of a high rise construction crane towering near the national cenotaph while the Queen lays the royal wreath.

He is lowered after the ceremony, missing a shot of two mounties racing to guard the wreath as a chunk of the crowd breaks and surges up the steps to gaze and snap the sad token.

Inundated, the red coats and the base of the monument disappear under the press of people. Two hours later, looking weary, the mounties are still trying to control a flock of sightseers. An hour later — only a few linger and a commissioner is relief guard.

Uniforms of all description infiltrate the masses of civilians, a colorful army themselves with gaudy miniskirts, Bermuda shorts, paisley pants, weird sunglasses, bare chests, beetle mops, bald pates.

The intent civil servants rushing home, finished for the holiday, break their orderly lines and dart pell-mell to the roadside barricades as they hear the skirl of pipes. Around the corner come highland pipers and drummers, ranks of guards in red coats and bearskin hats, contingents of white dressed tars, khaki uniformed soldiers and airmen.

But it's only a brief, impromptu parade. Mess call has sounded and they're marching off to supper. The crowd melts slowly, its mood suddenly gay.

Some wander down Sparks Street pedestrian mall where gleeful children play in the fountains, grownups shelter on benches under trees, barefoot hippies puddle ankle-deep in the pools and a young girl strums a guitar by a display case of paintings.

The great day at last. Brilliant sunshine confounding the thunderstorm predictions looses throngs eager for a happening.

Good natured, casually dressed but not in extreme styles, they come on foot from all directions, Parliament Hill drawing them like a magnet out of the stone canyons and onto the wide expanse of green grass, soon overflowing with a wide expanse of white faces.

As always, the undulating rolls of applause, rustling the lines like a hoarse wind, traces the progress of the royal motorcade. A cheer bursts forth as the Royal standard of Canada replaces the maple leaf atop the Peace Tower.

The ceremonial flourishes of the Royal Anthem catch the self-conscious rows of special guests by surprise as some stand, some crouch, undecided and others sit resolutely only to spring to attention in delayed confusion — all awkward in their exposed platform positions.

On the ground, children chatter, youths focus binoculars, amateurs struggle with cameras. As more hundreds arrive, some watch, others gossip, everyone circulates in search of a better position.

The crowd buzzes steadily like a cluster of bees, but meaning no disrespect, even while the Queen reads her speech.

A long, white banner wiggles over the mass of heads. It says "I'm proud to be a Canadian" on one side. On the other, "Je suis fier d'être Canadien."

"It's our centennial project," says one of the five students from MacDonald High School 20 miles from Montreal who made it and brought it here to hold high.

They are Robert Gibson, 17, Gloria Ness, 17, Diane Morrison, 17, Nancy Dunton, 16, Gordon Baker, 17.

Queen Sees All
In Expo TourDual Culture
Canada's Gift
To the World

MONTREAL (CP)—Queen Elizabeth today suggested that Canada's experiment with the problems of creating a unified country with cultural, social and language differences could be its greatest future gift to the world.

"The experiment that has been conducted for 100 years in this country, with some failures of course, but with increasing hopefulness, cannot leave our torn era indifferent," she said in a luncheon address at Canada's pavilion at Expo 67.

Her Majesty delivered that portion of her address dealing with unity and diversity in French.

MANY SEEK COHESION

So many nations today, she said, seek "to create a cohesiveness which both respects and unites the multiplicity of their internal divergences."

"This transformation is something painful. Canadians have discovered how much of generosity and political imagination it requires."

"They have learned that the greatness of any country or group is to be found in what it gives to the world."

Canadians deliberately chose cultural and social diversity and from the dawn of Confederation undertook to respect their differences. While concerned with unity and modern things, they remained profoundly faithful to their origins.

"They intend to continue as witnesses of two great European civilizations, witnesses of all European-American soil. The legacy of each group is the enriching of all."

"In the fruitful dialogue between its national cultures, Canada sees an essential mark of its own identity, a condition of its survival."

CASPER LEADS GOLF OPEN

MONTREAL (CP)—Billy Casper held a four-stroke lead over Art Wall after 14 holes in their 18-hole playoff this afternoon in the Canadian Open Golf Championship. Casper sank putts of 25 feet and 20 feet on the way to a five under par performance by the 13th hole. Wall hit five traps but recovered well to be one under at that point.

BULLETINS

TO VISIT B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said today he plans to invite Queen Elizabeth to visit British Columbia twice within the next four years. Mr. Bennett, who will attend a dinner Tuesday aboard the royal yacht Britannia near Kingston, said in an airport interview that he will invite the queen to attend ceremonies in B.C. in 1971 to mark the 100th anniversary of B.C.'s entry into Confederation. "But we will ask her to come here before that as well," he said.

Briefs Sought

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett said today he does not find the Carter Royal Commission report on taxation an easy pill to swallow. In an interview here before boarding a plane to Eastern Canada for a meeting with Queen Elizabeth, the premier invited interested citizens to submit to him briefs on the Carter report.

Park Retires

TORONTO (CP)—Eamon Park said today he will step down as president of the New Democratic Party at the current national convention.

Only name mentioned so far as successor is J. H. Brockelbank, a member of the party's federal council and a former Saskatchewan cabinet minister. Elections will be held Thursday. T. C. Douglas continues as national leader.

Diver Drowns

POWELL RIVER (CP)—A skin diver who drowned near Powell River was identified today as Christine Joanne Aafe, 18, of Seattle.

Her body was recovered by other skin divers at Saltery Bay, about 15 miles southeast of Powell River.

Island Family Excited With $60,000 Win

A Campbell River man won $60,000 in the running of the Irish Derby at Curragh, Ireland, Saturday.

Robert Walker, former owner of a stationery store, held a ticket on second place horse Sucaryl.

He is married and has two children.

Son David, 21, is enrolled in a business management course at the British Columbia Institute of Technology. Joan, 19, is a secretary at the Campbell River hospital.

Mr. Walker said the entire family is "surprised and excited."

"I've been buying sweepstakes tickets for over 12 years," he said.

Except for a trip to Expo

and a visit with a brother in Halifax, the Walkers have no immediate plans.

Since selling his stationery business, Mr. Walker hasn't decided what he will do next. He plans to invest his winnings for the time being.

Two other British Columbia residents also won $60,000.

One of them was Rex Lupton, of Westbank, near Kelowna.

Owner of a real estate business, he intends to invest the money in his firm.

A psychiatric nurse at Riverview Hospital near Coquitlam, Mrs. Ethel Miller held a ticket on the third place horse, Dart Board. She won $30,000.

No one in B.C. held a ticket on the winner, Ribicco. Eight Canadians won the $150,000 top prize.

Four Victorians and three other Vancouver Island residents drew tickets on horses not running.

They will receive $1,300 consolation prizes.

Fighting
Erupts
At Canal

From AP-Reuters

Egyptian and Israeli troops clashed at the Suez Canal for the third straight day today.

The Israeli Army said Egyptian troops on the canal's west bank lobbed mortars and fired machine-guns for 20 minutes at Israeli soldiers on the east bank near El Quantara, about 25 miles from the canal's northern entrance.

Israel, which captured nearly all of Egypt east of the canal in the June 1967 war, reported three such mortar and machine-gun attacks Sunday on its positions near El Quantara. The Israelis said they silenced the Egyptian gunners each time.

The two sides clashed Saturday night on the east bank. Egypt claimed its men had been there all along. Israel said about 100 Egyptians had crossed the canal and penetrated about nine miles into the Sinai Peninsula before being driven back across the waterway.

Israeli military men interpreted the new outbreak as an attempt by Egyptian President Nasser to rally his shattered army against the threat of an Israeli invasion.

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—The UN General Assembly passed a vote today on the Middle East crisis as sponsors of two rival resolutions vied for the two-thirds majority necessary for approval.

BIG MOMENT of the July 1 celebrations at Legislative Buildings Saturday came when Rear Admiral John A. Charles presented hand-embroidered flag to Premier Bennett during ceremonies which included parade of men of all branches of the armed forces, a march past, and a fly-past by air force jets from Comox. (More July 1 celebration pictures and stories on Page 14.)

Canada Timid on Viet
Due to U.S. Tie—NDP

TORONTO (CP)—T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, aroused a party convention today with charges that dependence on the United States has made the Canadian government timid on the Vietnam war.

In his keynote address at the opening of the party's fourth national convention, he said Canada is becoming an economic colony of the U.S. Its capacity for independent action in world affairs is being reduced to zero.

Fairly subdued to that point, the packed hotel convention hall erupted into applause as the socialist leader decried the "ambivalent" Canadian role in the war.

He said Canada should ask other countries to join in a declaration calling for an unconditional end to the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

The Americans are "seeking to foist on the people of South Vietnam a government of rapacious landlords, military dictators and discredited collaborators of a colonial regime."

It's gittin' so now; a public holiday's a success if y' git through it alive.

...CENTENNIAL MANIA

"Everyone makes it sound like a crime. They ask why did we do it. We're just what the sign says, proud to be Canadians. You're from Victoria? Gee, all the way across Canada? Gee."

Suddenly, it's over and the crowd breaks at a dead-run toward the receding line of mounds for a last shout and wave at the Monarch—fast for the morning.

Sixty tons of carillons peal out sweet sound above, as once again the RCMP, a whole platoon this time, forms a protective screen around the throne chair on its red carpeted dais where a massive surge spills great numbers to gaze and photograph.

Suddenly I feel alone in the crowd, recognizing only the faces of old-pictured VIPs but no friends. I notice that the solid-seeming stone block and polished timber backdrop supporting the canopy over the throne is made—only of cardboard and smooth paper. Half an hour later, it is gone.

As the four Howitzers begin crashing out their 100-high-velocity blanks nearby, I seek shelter inside the dim and peaceful light of the rotunda under the Peace Tower although it's stone floor trembles with each muffled roar.

I am alone, save for one woman sitting with her head sunk into a hand and the business-as-usual commissioners. The central stone pillar catches my eye, it is deeply inscribed: —1817-1917 July

"On the fifteenth anniversary of the confederation of British Colonies in North America as the Dominion of Canada, Parliament and people dedicate this building, in process of reconstruction after damage by fire, as a memorial to the deeds of their forefathers and of the valour of those Canadians who in the great war fought for the liberty of Canada, of the Empire and of Humanity."

It serves as a reminder that in this day's ceremony, too, the main performer remains the institution which this building houses—government by peers freely chosen.

For the captains and the kings depart and even great wars dim in memory as they are succeeded by unforeseen and even greater wars. And where is the Empire now?

History of necessity will rush by this moment as it leaves everything behind.

I ponder on this again later as I view the cornerstone inscriptions on the great edifices here, names such as the Duke of Connaught, Prince of Wales, King George VI and am brought up short by the name on the national archives and library opened a month back. It is Georges F. Vanier, who was to have presided over this celebration but already is a Governor-General of the past.

Was it characteristic Canadianism to take this turn of mind or was I just responding to the reports in both the Toronto and Fleet Street press that many think this will be the last royal tour by an English Monarch in Canada and that there is a sense of unease in the land that even surprisingly-successful centennial celebrations can't soothe.

Outside, the bronze back of Sir John A. Macdonald's monument is firmly turned against the howitzers creating their ear-splitting, eye-blinking racket as if to underline that the sound of guns is no way to praise the birth of a nation which was created by silent pen strokes, to our great good luck.

Three tons climb happily over the shield-bearing female figure in bronze at Sir John A.'s feet and I am comforted to see someone has poked a bouquet of roses through the crown top of the bronze standard in her hand.

I suddenly realize that I have seen only one drunk staggering through the streets since the celebrations began. How different, I imagine, it must have been 100 years ago.

But troubled thoughts return. For I have seen only a handful of negroes in this happy city and but two Indian faces, one of them, a costumed maiden in a parade.

Why are there so few here when this nation, which occupies half a continent in which millions of colored people live, celebrates its good fortune? The question answers itself, unhappily.

The kids save the day once more—sweeping over the grounds for the Queen's appearance at the afternoon birthday party complete with huge cake, clowns, puppets, tumblers and many other acts following Judy La Marsh's invitation to everybody come on down and have a good time.

More than 1,000 balloons are quickly passed out and most of them sail off into the blue towards Montreal. Then come the goodies.

The Queen joins in the happiness of numberless youngsters then rushed off to another green area where there is a "royal hullabaloo" with teenagers singing and swinging.

Afterwards, Parliament Hill is so thickly littered with paper wrappers, cups and bits of cake that it piles up a foot high at the curbside like drifted snow. But everyone did have a good time and maintenance men guiding power-sweepers soon plough it green again, row by row.

Resting, my eye follows the angry of a clucking, head-wagging grey-headed lady beside me and I see a yellow shirted boy cycling through thick traffic gleefully and proudly back at the centennial balloon he dangles in the breeze. He disappears abruptly in the swirl of buses and cars and the old woman mutters to herself.

"Three shavers in Air Force cadet uniforms appear broadly smiling under the small red maple leaf flags they wear as cockades in their hats, and the woman clucks again.

"It's their century coming up and they'll live it in their own style, not ours, I whisper, but she doesn't hear.

And now it's night, and I am on a ninth-storey roof with my eyes dazzled by the splendid fireworks surrounding the Peace Tower while the whole square below is illuminated intermittently as a building-to-building carpet of people looking upwards.

Cars honk everywhere; people shout and a cynic beside me laughs and says sarcastically, "I will cherish this moment forever."

He doesn't mean it. But I do. And undoubtedly it will never be forgotten by the thousands of children in that crowd below thrilling to be allowed to stay up until midnight to see something so fabulous. None of them could have had a better birthday celebration.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

DOMINION PUBLIC WEATHER OFFICE 9 A.M. FORECASTS

Valid Until Midnight Tuesday

SYNOPSIS: Rain is expected to reach the north coast today and cloud will continue to penetrate the central interior due to a disturbance in the Gulf of Alaska. Sunny, warm weather will continue in southern regions. Afternoon temperatures will reach 85 on parts of the south coast and 80 to 95 in the southern interior today. However, a high level disturbance moving eastward over Washington and Oregon brings a threat of isolated thunderstorms for southeastern B.C. this afternoon. Cloud and showers are expected in northern regions on Tuesday but most of the south will be sunny and warm. However, a return to an onshore flow will bring low cloud to the West Coast and Juan de Fuca Strait tonight and Tuesday morning, and cause a drop in temperatures on the south coast and Lower Mainland.

Victoria—Sunny and warm today. Mainly sunny but cooler on Tuesday. Winds light becoming southwest 15 with higher gusts this afternoon and evening and continuing through Tuesday. Low tonight and high Tuesday, 56 and 66.

Vancouver, Georgia Strait—Small craft warning in effect for Georgia Strait. Sunny and warm today. Mainly sunny but cooler on Tuesday. Winds west 15 to day except Georgia Strait winds northwest 25. Winds southeast 15 tonight and Tuesday. Low tonight and high Tuesday at Vancouver, 58 and 70; Abbotsford and Nanaimo, 55 and 75.

West Coast—Sunny and warm today. Low cloud and fog overnight and Tuesday morning becoming sunny in the afternoon. Cooler Tuesday. Winds northwest 15, at times 25 in exposed areas today becoming light tonight and west 15 on Tuesday. Low tonight and high Tuesday at Tofino, 50 and 63.
